

Italy Ready to Move for Peace, Ciano Asserts

Staying Out of War Under Agreement With Nazis PACT MAY LAST Declares Rome and Berlin Didn't Want to Disturb Peace

Rome—(AP)—Foreign Minister Count Galeazzo Ciano declared Italy was staying out of the European war by agreement with her ally, Germany, and reaffirmed Premier Mussolini's readiness to help restore peace.

Ciano, in a lengthy explanation of fascist foreign policy to the Chamber of Fasces and Guilds, disclosed that Germany and Italy agreed at the Milan conference, last May, when their alliance was signed, to avoid raising any new disputes in at least three years, while both countries completed their rearmament.

The Italians regarded three years as necessary for "perfection of internal reconstruction and completion of military preparations," Ciano said, adding that the Germans estimated their period at four or five years.

Denies War Intent

This agreement showed, according to Ciano, that Germany and Italy lacked any intention of disturbing peace.

Ciano went on to say that Italy was determined to safeguard her own interests.

"Fascist Italy continues to follow the development of events with a vigilant spirit," he said, "ever ready if possible, to give once again her contribution to world peace."

"But she is equally determined to protect with an inflexible firmness the interests of her land, air and sea traffic, not to mention her prestige and her future as a great power."

Ciano disclosed he had informed the Germans that Italy considered three years necessary to "bring preparation of its war means to the desired level, namely the maximum, because of the heavy drain of the Ethiopian and Spanish wars."

"But nobody has the right to deduce from that," he added, "that Italy was unprepared at the time of test."

Criticizes Allies

Il Duce occupied a government bench amid his new cabinet in the chamber, crowded with blackshirts. Britain and France for Germany's non-aggression pact with Soviet Russia and the post-World war treaties for Europe's plight.

Ciano disclosed he had informed Adolf Hitler of Italy's desire to limit the war when he visited the fuhrer and German Foreign Minister Joachim von Ribbentrop last August at Salzburg.

Ciano stated Italy's opposition to formation of a Balkan bloc of neutral powers, contending such a step would be useless, but he reaffirmed the Italian policy "to maintain and consolidate peace and order in the Danubian and Balkan sectors."

He was sharply critical of British-French Russian mutual assistance negotiations, arguing they had resulted only in the non-aggression alliance between Moscow and Berlin.

"If the great democracies had only ignored Russia," he said, "Germany would have had good reason to do likewise."

Asks Supreme Court to Review Medberry Case

Denver—(AP)—John E. O'Brien, Fond du Lac, Wis., attorney for Ellsworth E. Medberry, 22, convicted hitchhike slayer, asked the Colorado supreme court yesterday for permission to file appeal briefs and abstract.

O'Brien's petition asked waiver of the appeal docket fee. The attorney said Medberry's family spent all its savings for his defense in a district court trial at Akron.

Medberry was convicted of shooting to death John T. Gray, 32, a Colorado Springs salesman.

'YELLOW KID' IN TROUBLE AGAIN

Joseph E. "Yellow Kid" Weil, 63, lounges in a chair at the Chicago detective bureau after he was seized by postal inspectors for removal to New York to face a mail fraud charge. Former Regional Chief of Board Says He Was Told to Make Industry 'Fear Him'

Washington—(AP)—A former regional director of the national labor relations board testified before a congressional investigating committee today that a member of what he called the board's "goon squad" had told him to make industry "fear" him and the board.

James P. Miller, who served as regional director at Cleveland, Ohio, told the house committee investigating the board that such advice was given him by Fred Krivonos, of the Washington staff of the labor board, during the latter's visit to the Cleveland office.

Krivonos, Miller said, was sent to Cleveland after Nathan Witt, board secretary, had written a letter complaining of the Cleveland office's handling of cases involving the Hoover Vacuum Cleaner Manufacturing company.

The witness quoted Witt's letter as stating that it was plain that a new "independent" union of the Hoover company's employees was the same "company-dominated" union which had been dis-established earlier.

The letter "just burned us up," Miller asserted, because it has "no foundation in fact." Then, he continued to page 8 col. 2.

McNutt Admits He Is In Dark Concerning Plans of Roosevelt

Indianapolis—(AP)—Paul V. McNutt, federal security administrator who is a candidate for the Democratic nomination for president next year, frankly admits he is in the dark on his chief's third term intentions.

Speaking here last night at the annual Indiana university football banquet, the former Hoosier governor said:

"You don't know whether the quarterback wants you to carry the ball or to run interference."

"Sometimes," McNutt said, "the whole team wants to call the signals."

Referring to the recent statement by Secretary of Interior Harold Ickes that liberals would not support McNutt for president, the security administrator told the 400 guests:

"My office is only an epithet away from the interior department and a stone's throw from the post office department."

(Postmaster James A. Farley is an old political enemy of McNutt.)

"I don't listen to second-stringers who come into the stadium on an Annie Oakley and take their seat on the wrong team's bench," he added.

Judge at Racine Orders Briefs To be Filed on Disposition of Bequest Made by Mrs. Horlick

Racine—(AP)—County Judge J. Alan Simpson instructed attorneys to file briefs after a day-long hearing yesterday concerning disposition of a $200,000 bequest made by the late Mrs. Arabella Horlick, whose husband, William Horlick, Sr., founded the malted milk fortune.

An estate of $1,750,000 was disposed of in Mrs. Horlick's will. She ordered it divided among her surviving children, but later added a codicil which provided that if her daughter, Mrs. Maybelle Horlick Sidley, preceded her in death, then $200,000 should go to the estate of Mrs. Sidley.

Mrs. Sidley died four days before her mother.

Eight individuals and institutions were represented before Judge Simpson. The hearing was to determine whether the $200,000 should be turned into the residuary estate of Mrs. Sidley for distribution according to terms of the will, or whether it should go directly to her son, William Horlick Sidley.

All the briefs are not expected to be filed until Feb. 1, when Judge Simpson will study them and give a decision.

The representations yesterday were by William Horlick Sidley; executors of Mrs. Horlick's estate; executors of Mrs. Sidley's estate; William Horlick, Jr., and A. J. Horlick, sons of the late William and Arabella Horlick, Sr.; Neal Conway, state inheritance tax counsel; St. Luke's hospital, Racine, which receives a $100,000 request from Mrs. Sidley's estate if the cash residue is sufficient, and St. John's Military academy, which receives a portion of the residue of Mrs. Sidley's estate.

A larger amount of inheritance tax would be levied against the $200,000 if it were turned into the residuary rather than being given directly to William Horlick Sidley.

U. S. Tightens Its Embargo on Soviet Sales

Tries to Keep Plane-Making Materials from Nations Bombing Civilians

MAY AFFECT NAZIS

Finns Burn Villages as They Retreat in Sal-mijarvi Sector

Helsinki—(AP)—The Finnish high command announced tonight that Russian attacks on the Karelian isthmus, supported by 50 tanks and "severe artillery fire," had been repulsed with "great enemy losses."

A communiqué announced that 14 of the tanks were destroyed while four "drove up to our position and surrendered."

Russian attacks in a number of other sectors also were repulsed with losses, it declared.

The communiqué announced the destruction of one Russian patrol boat when Finnish shore batteries drove off attacks on islands in the eastern gulf of Finland.

The battle in the Suomussalmi region, on the central front, where the Finns previously had reported Russian units cut off, is proceeding toward a conclusion, the communiqué said.

Washington—(AP)—The United States government undertook today to stop the shipment of plane-making materials to nations which bomb civilian populations.

It reminded manufacturers who export war materials that the "moral embargo" previously invoked against plane sales to Russia and Japan applied as well against any materials essential to the manufacture of aircraft.

Speculation arose in the capital as to whether the broadened ban might pinch Germany as well as Russia and Japan, even though she has not been mentioned specifically by officials as being embraced within the "moral embargo."

In its letters to manufacturers, the state department specifically included molybdenum (an essential ingredient for hard steel) and aluminum under the ban. Russian imports of molybdenum have increased tremendously since the European war began, and reports were current here that some of it was being re-exported to Germany.

The basis of the "moral embargo" was simply the government's appeal to manufacturers. Although there is no power of enforcement, other than public opinion, the embargo has proved effective in the past.

Sharing interest in the capital with the state department's action were these other war developments:

American republics began consulting to determine what to do about recent naval warfare inside the Pan-American Republics.

'Gone With the Wind' Acclaimed in Atlanta At Its First Showing

Atlanta—(AP)—Atlanta threw a patent leather shoe at the alarm clock this morning, reached for an aspirin, tossed another kiss at "Gone With the Wind" and started catching up on lost sleep.

Already hailed by Hollywood preview critics as a super-colossal number, this 9-hour and 57-minute movie was run off for the first time in public and a bill of the 2,081 seat-holders would have been a one-sided as a straw vote on prohibition at a W.C.T.U. convention.

Two days of cheers for the west coast glamour girls and boys brought here for the premiere gave way to waves of handclapping for the picture itself.

The work of Vivien Leigh, relatively obscure English actress chosen for the back-breaking role of Scarlett O'Hara, seemed to be the most impressive feature, even after making due allowance for the dominance of her role.

Clark Gable apparently pleased the $10-a-head customers with his dashing Rhett Butler.

Game Refuge Biologist Drowns on Patrol Duty

Minneapolis—(AP)—Word was received here by Supervisor Ray Steele of the upper Mississippi game refuge that Joseph G. Teff of Lansing, Iowa, a staff biologist, had drowned yesterday near De Soto, Wis. Steele, here for the Izaak Walton convention, said Teff crashed through ice over the Mississippi while on patrol duty.

Graf Spee Must Run Gauntlet or Face Internment

British Seamanship, Lack Of Fuel Put Graf Spee at Disadvantage, Captain Says

Montevideo—(AP)—Depleted fuel, and daring British seamanship which was "more than seemed credible," forced the German warship Admiral Graf Spee into a running fight dangerously near shore, Captain Hans Langsdorff told port authorities today.

In the first authoritative accounts of Wednesday's 14-hour battle with three British cruisers, the German commander spoke with matter-of-fact objectivity.

About 6 a. m. Wednesday, he said, he glimpsed the British cruiser Exeter off the Brazil coast. The Admiral Graf Spee headed to the south, for Langsdorff said his ship already was in "a critical condition" due to a lack of fuel.

He explained he had been unable to establish contact with the supply ship Tacoma, which had loaded at Montevideo some time before.

While Langsdorff was taking stock of the Exeter, he suddenly found himself in the presence of the British cruisers, Ajax and Achilles, and by this time was opposite the Uruguayan coast.

These two smaller, faster vessels maneuvered so the German pocket battleship was between them and the shore.

Took Offensive

Fearing he might go aground in shallow water, and yet unable to run to sea for an open fight because of little fuel, Langsdorff said he found himself "between the devil and the deep blue sea."

Therefore, he went on the offensive and opened fire on the Exeter with his 11-inch guns.

The Exeter replied with eight-inch cannon, and a thunderous duel ensued.

Langsdorff said he damaged the Exeter severely before the Ajax and Achilles could bring their six-inch guns to bear.

When the smaller ships did so, however, they were the ones which really hurt the Admiral Graf Spee. Langsdorff said they inflicted "enormous damage," battering the bow and control tower and causing many deaths and injuries, especially in the control tower.

With dead and wounded strewn about, the remainder of the crew in confusion and Langsdorff himself slightly injured, he desperately tried to turn to page 2 col. 4.

Short Trial on Lobbying Charges Ended at Madison

Circuit Judge Orders Attorneys to File Briefs By Dec. 23

Madison—(AP)—Circuit Judge A. C. Hoppmann instructed attorneys to file briefs by Dec. 23 at the end of a brief trial yesterday for Fred W. Cords, Milwaukee, charged with illegal lobbying on a small loans bill at the last session of the legislature.

District Attorney Norris E. Maloney and his assistant, Henry Behnke, sought to show that Cords offered to accept $1,500 provided he succeeded in defeating the bill. Attorneys Norman R. Klug and Patrick W. Dean, Milwaukee, sought to show that Cords did not offer his services on a contingency basis.

The state's case hinges on the contingency feature.

Judge Hoppmann refused to dismiss the charge on motion of Cords' counsel after hearing testimony of three state witnesses, Attorney William J. P. Aberg, Madison, counsel for the Wisconsin Association of Personal Finance Companies, Senator Fred R. Risser (P) Madison, and George Brown, records supervisor in the secretary of state's office.

Refused Funds

Aberg testified that on June 6, 1939, Cords suggested to him that he thought it would be possible to have a bill affecting small loans companies withdrawn.

"He indicated it would cost $1,500 to get rid of it, or to have it withdrawn," Aberg testified.

Hungary in Small Payment; 8 Nations Send Their 'Regrets'

Washington—(AP)—When government bookkeepers checked their war-debt accounts today after the semi-annual payment date, they found Uncle Sam had received one and a half mills on the dollar—and was preparing to turn back most of that.

Thirteen nations had payments due yesterday totalling $161,167,556.68.

One, Finland, paid her installment—$234,693—in full.

One other, Hungary, made a partial payment—$9,828.

Eight others sent "regrets."

Two others, Great Britain and Belgium, had not been heard from, but their replies were expected to contain "regrets." From the thirteenth, Czechoslovakia, no reply was expected, since no bill had been sent.

Of those that sent "regrets," Rumania repeated her offer to negotiate a debt settlement, as proposed in a note of Jan. 15.

Two countries—Poland and Rumania—cited the European war as an additional reason for not making the Dec. 15 payment.

Uruguay Finds Ship Seaworthy; Dead-line Is Sunday ALLIES WAITING

British Squadron Watching Outside Montevideo Harbor

Montevideo—(AP)—The alternative of life in internment or possible death on the high seas faced Germany's shot-riddled pocket battleship Admiral Graf Spee today.

The Uruguayan government, accepting the report of a naval board that the warship was seaworthy, gave its commander, Captain Hans Langsdorff, until 5 p. m. Sunday (2:30 p. m. C. S. T.) to sail, or let his ship become a prisoner here for the duration of the war between Great Britain and Germany.

Lurking hungrily outside the harbor was a squadron of British warships, including the Ajax and Achilles, which with the cruiser Exeter battered the German vessel from waterline to fighting-top in a 14-hour battle Wednesday.

The British admiralty said the cruisers had been "strongly reinforced." It was indicated the British cruiser Cumberland had joined them, and that the French battleship Dunkerque was enroute.

British Patrol

German sources here asserted the British ships on guard included an aircraft carrier, a battleship, the Renown type, one heavy cruiser, two light cruisers and two or three destroyers.

Britain had made two urgent demands that Uruguay intern the Admiral Graf Spee, or force it to leave its refuge. The Uruguayan foreign office previously had said the ship could be made seaworthy before sailing, without setting a deadline.

Subsequently, the naval board was asked to determine the necessity time, and Commander Rodriguez Varela and Lieutenant Commander Mario Fontana reported the Admiral Graf Spee could navigate without extensive repairs.

Unable to Navigate

The naval board held that as far as navigation was concerned, the ship could steam out of the harbor at any time. It was pointed out that in running for cover, the Admiral Graf Spee entered port at 20 knots, and that a ship making that much speed had nothing radically wrong with its machinery.

It was reported principal damage to the ship's fighting equipment was the ruin of its two scouting planes and a shell-hit in the control tower. Reports were circulated widely in Montevideo and Buenos Aires that the ship would sail ahead of the deadline.

German business leaders here said "national prestige" would require the running of the British gauntlet but German Minister Otto Langmann said only that he was communicating with the government.

The 36 dead seamen were buried yesterday, and the more critically wounded were in hospitals ashore.

German Freighter in Hands of British Crew

Santiago, Chile—(AP)—The British Cruiser Despatch was reported moving northward off the Chilean coast today with the 4,930-ton German freighter Dueseldorf as a war prize following its capture yesterday off Caldera, 360 miles north of Valparaiso.

First reports indicated the Dueseldorf had been sunk instead of captured.

Governor Turns Down Glen Barker's Plea For Prison Release

Post-Crescent Madison Bureau Madison—Governor Heil yesterday denied a pardon to Glen Barker, 26, Outagamie county farm hand sentenced in 1937 to 14 to 20 years in state prison for second degree manslaughter. The denial was with the recommendation of the state pardon board.

In his appeal to the board, Barker had maintained that the charge against him was improperly lodged, that he should have been convicted on fourth degree instead of second degree manslaughter. He was sentenced in the Outagamie county circuit court for killing his sweetheart, Helen Welhouse, 18 year old Little Chute girl.

Says Accomplice Hired Doctor to Dissect Victim

Winnie Ruth Judd Wants
Chance to Tell Story
On Witness Stand

Phoenix, Ariz. — (AP) — The story Winnie Ruth Judd wants to tell from the witness stand—of killing two women friends in self-defense and of having an accomplice who hired a physician to dissect one of the bodies—today was in the hands of officers who returned the mad slayer to the Arizona state hospital for the insane.

After giving a detailed connected account of the eight-year-old killings, the 34-year-old stenographer was locked in a private cell at the asylum from which she escaped 12 days ago—the second time in six weeks—"because I couldn't stand staying all the time in one room full of screaming, raving, sick, dying people."

Shouting hysterically that "they're going to cut my head off," Mrs. Judd was locked in a ward of a new building from which authorities said escape would be more difficult.

Footsore and weary from 12 days of hiking almost 200 miles across the desert, Mrs. Judd was captured in Yuma shortly after noon yesterday.

Tells "True Story"
During a five-hour drive to Phoenix, Mrs. Judd told Sheriff T. H. Newman and newsmen what she said was a "true story" of the murders of Agnes Ann Leroi and Hedwig Samuelson, Oct. 16, 1931.

Her detailed account was an elaboration of statements contained in a 12-page letter which she had in her possession. In this letter she claimed she killed the two women during a fight, and that a friend hired a physician to dissect the body of Miss Samuelson so the two would fit into trunks which were shipped to Los Angeles.

The letter, in longhand, written before she fled from the hospital, Dec. 3, named the physician and the friend who employed him. The friend, she said, then bought her a train ticket to Los Angeles, where she was arrested a week later.

Mrs. Judd told part of her story to the state board of pardons and paroles in 1932 while trying to escape the gallows.

Describes Quarrel
In her more detailed account, she said she quarreled with Miss Samuelson and Mrs. Leroi, who was employed at a local clinic. They threatened to tell Dr. Judd she had been "stepping out" with another man and she retaliated with a threat to disclose their secrets.

"Miss Samuelson came at me with a small automatic," Mrs. Judd said. "I grabbed a butcher knife and stabbed her twice in the (left) shoulder. The knife bent double."

"Then as I grabbed for the gun, I was shot in the hand, right hand. (She pointed to her left hand) she was wounded at the time of her arrest. I caught hold of her hand and twisted it. And Sammy was shot by the man which was still in her hand. The man fell to the floor."

She said Mrs. Leroi then attacked her with an ironing board and while they were tumbling about the floor she recovered the gun and shot her.

After she returned to her own apartment a friend came by "while I was still very excited" and said he would get someone to "take care of the bodies."

"I couldn't have done that," she said of the surgery. "I knew nothing about surgery. I was only a medical stenographer."

All of this, Mrs. Judd said she wanted to tell from the witness stand. Since her attorneys denied her the privilege in her trial for killing Mrs. Leroi, she wants to be tried for killing Miss Samuelson.

When captured, Mrs. Judd said she "hadn't eaten for a week" until she bought some crackers and butter—which she ate on the courthouse steps—in Yuma yesterday morning.

drawn," Aberg said, "I told him we wouldn't spend a thin dime and we were not worried about the bill."

Under questioning by City counsel Aberg admitted that in previous legislative sessions he introduced the Milwaukee loan to small loans companies which employed him. He added that Cords did not meet that he expected to be paid $1,500 only the condition of passage, defeat or withdrawal of the pending bill.

Cords testified he offered his services to the small loans companies for $1,500. Questioned by Attorney Klug, he asserted he discussed this matter with Aberg.

"He (Aberg) asked me if he was successful in getting me employment what my charge would be," Cords declared. "I told him I would attempt to have this bill withdrawn or defeated and that my charge would be $1,500 for my services."

Brown testified the small loans bill involved was introduced by Senator Allen J. Busby (P) Milwaukee, and Senator Risser explained procedure in withdrawing a bill.

Testifying as a defense witness, Edward F. Olin, chief of the senate reference library, explained senate procedure on a bill.

Michigan Miners Prepare for Visit From Santa Claus

Isipeming, Mich. — (AP) — Miners of the Inland Steel prepared their tunnels and shafts today for the coming of Santa Claus.

The white-bearded old gentleman will arrive Monday. Not down the chimney, but down the shafts of the Morris and Greenwood mines.

The custom was started some years ago by Captain Charles Miron, since transferred to the Penn mine at Vulcan, Mich., and employees consider it a red-letter day of the year, usually reminiscent of events of the year past and distributed.

Formerly, Santa's visit was made only at the Morris mine, 1,400 feet underground. Jim Fowler, who has all the necessary contours, represents the jolly old gent with white beard and red garments. This year's visit at the Greenwood mine will be the first, and there has been search for someone to team with Fowler.

No Changes Announced In Reformatory Rules
Green Bay — (AP) — Superintendent Earl H. Eklund of the state reformatory said today that he had received no instructions regarding change in rules such as those announced yesterday for the state prison at Waupun.

Hair-clipping and the silence rule were abolished at Waupun and visiting was limited.

The silence rule prevails here only in cell houses and during marching to and from work. Eklund said, having been abolished in the shops and dining hall some years ago. All incoming inmates have their hair clipped as a sanitary measure, he added. There are no restrictions on visiting.

Eklund reminded relatives of inmates that no Christmas packages of any kind are accepted at the reformatory because of the danger of carrying infection. Relatives may send news with which inmates can purchase Christmas treats at the institution's commissary.

Select Technical Body on Study of River Pollution

Paper Mills' Committee
Will Work Out Plan
Of Procedure

Appointment of a technical committee to work out a plan of procedure for the recently approved investigation into methods of ending pollution of Wisconsin streams by sulphite liquor from paper mills was announced today by J. M. Conway, president and general manager of Hoberg Paper Mills, Green Bay, and chairman of the executive committee of Wisconsin sulphite pulp manufacturers.

The announcement follows a meeting held earlier this week at the Institute of Paper Chemistry, where technical research will be carried on. At this meeting, the executive committee decided to ask each of the 12 sulphite producing mills in the state to appoint one of its laboratory staff to the technical committee.

This committee's task will be to confer with all agencies interested in sulphite waste pollution; the state board of health; the conservation department; and the Forest Products Laboratory, Madison. The committee then will seek all available counties, in some of which considerable progress has been made.

After this study is completed, the technical committee will draw up a proposed plan of procedure for submission to the executive committee, which consists of heads of the various mills. The executive committee will approve the plan or request changes. When final approval is given, the plan will be turned over to the institute for procedure with the research work.

The Exeter was out of the fight by then, but took up a position on the north, preventing any German ally that direction.

At this point, Langsdorff found fighting his best strategy and after scoring a hit "either on the Ajax or the Achilles, I cannot recall exactly," turned southward.

Then began what the British admiralty called "a running fight," even the battered Exeter stuck doggedly to the pursuit at a slower pace.

A little later the German ship foamed into Montevideo harbor as the British slackened speed and stood offshore.

HOME BOMBED

Attractive Mary Jo Miller (above), now a physical education instructor at Oak Park, Ill., was accused by the divorced wife of Texas educator E. Ross Wyatt of stealing her husband's affections. Wyatt is on trial at Dallas, Tex., charged with bombing Miss Miller's residence. She formerly taught school in Texas.

Texas Home Bombing Case Is Expected to Go to Jurors Today

Dallas — (AP) — A jury will be asked today to decide whether E. R. Wyatt, lanky former school superintendent, bombed the home of his former secretary because she spurned his attentions. He maintains he was hundreds of miles away when dynamite wrecked her room.

Wyatt himself climaxed tales of his amorous escapades with testimony that he was intimate with Mary Jo Miller at Brookland from 1931 until 1937. Then, he said, she left after he told her he did not intend to marry her.

Miss Miller told the jury she accepted Wyatt's attentions for a while for fear of losing her job, then spurned him. Her rejection, the state charges, so angered Wyatt that he threatened her life and later tried to dynamite her.

The prosecution asks that Wyatt be imprisoned for life. The penalty for burglary with explosives is five years to life.

Conner Offers Speaker To Explain 1940 Census

Thomas Conner, area manager of the 1940 census, has offered to furnish a speaker to explain census methods if local arrangements can be made. The offer came today to the Appleton Chamber of Commerce office.

The sixteenth decennial census will start with the enumeration of business and manufacturing establishments beginning Jan. 2. The population, agriculture and housing census are scheduled to begin April 2.

Conner said the 1940 census will be the most comprehensive and important in the history of the nation. Business men, economists and students of the government are looking forward to the tabulation of the nation's resources with keen interest, he wrote.

Homes Built in 1939 Exceeded Total Last Year

John A. Pierre, city building inspector, said today that more homes were built in Appleton during the first 11 months of 1939 than during the 12 months of 1938. A total of 136 homes were built last year against 138 homes during the first 11 months of this year.

Sambs Herd Takes Production Honor In Testing Group

Pounds of Butterfat
During November

Averaging 811 pounds of milk or 31.9 pounds of butterfat, the herd owned by Mrs. Mary Sambs took the high production honor for November in the Outagamie County Dairy Herd Improvement association, No. 2, according to Glenn Richmond, tester.

The Huebner Bros. herd was second with an average of 30.2 pounds of butterfat, and a close third was the Loren Anderson herd with a 30.1-pound butterfat average. In fourth place was the Henry Hafer, becker herd with 28.1 pounds. The Edwin Lemke herd was fifth with 27.7 pounds.

"Countess," a cow in the Huebner herd placed high in individual production with 76 pounds of milk per day testing 53 per cent butterfat. The second high cow, owned by Ben Bolinski, showed 73.4 pounds of fat for the month. Third and fourth places went to cows in the Huebner herd with 71.1 and 68.6 pounds of butterfat.

Following are owners and number of cows producing 40 or more pounds of butterfat during the month: Ben Bolinski 8, Huebner Bros. 6, Mrs. Mary Sambs 8, Loren Anderson 5, Edwin Lemke 3, Gust Henn 2, Carl Hughes 2, Orville Peterson 2, Julius Pohl 2, Edward C. Rahm 2, Louis Timm 2, Henry Haferbecker 1 and Arnold Lemke 1.

Chicago Bankruptcies In Slight Decrease

Chicago — (AP) — Bankruptcies filed in the Chicago federal court during 1939 decreased slightly from 1938, a survey showed today. Cases filed up to the present this year totaled 2,199, against 2,294 for the same period a year ago. The drop was 3.7 per cent.

Committee Purchases 25 Blankets for Jail

The county purchasing committee yesterday at the courthouse purchased 25 blankets for the county jail from the Interstate Bedding company, Chicago. Janitor supplies and a new flag for the flagpole at the courthouse also were purchased. Bills amounting to about $105 were allowed.

Scouts Eye the Skies, Search For Sign of a Nice Snowflake

If they could reach that unearthly fellow, valley council scouts and scouters would like to pound Old Man Winter on the back and yell, "Come on, give us some snow."

Troop members and leaders brooded over the calendar today and ran their index fingers up to the Dec. 26, only 10 days off and the opening of winter camp at Gardner Dam.

Then they turned their eyes on the barren ground, sensed the mild temperatures, and muttered something about how winter had better stop all this delayed offense style of play and get those snowflakes flying.

This morning Clarence H. Engberg, valley council executive, set out to begin purchases of supplies for the 5-day outing at the council camp on the Wolf river in Langlade county.

"Boys, we're praying for snow and lots of it," he said. "We know the skating is going to be great up there on the swimming pool area, and we are certain there will be some snow, of course. But we want at least a foot of it for our skiing program."

Meanwhile, boy scouts of the council apparently aren't aware that December is slipping by and the date for winter camp getting close. Plans call for the billeting of 40 youths in the Miner camps, newest of the Gardner Dam buildings. Registrations are coming in, but they're not moving much faster than winter.

Ralph Sues, Jr., of Menasha, a member of Troop 9, is the latest scout to register for the winter outing. The schedule calls for the scouts to gather at the camp Tuesday.

Icy Roads Blamed
For Two Accidents
A light rainfall last night followed by a drop in the temperature this morning and an icy condition in the Appleton area has caused two accidents in which two persons were hurt and a number of cars to skid into ditches.

Mrs. Dorothy Schappelle, 48 Lake street, Oshkosh, suffered a bruised shoulder when her car tipped over on Highway 45 near Greenville. Grange hall about 8:15 this morning. She was driving north and lost control of the machine when it struck an icy spot. Coming to Captain Charles Steidl of the county traffic squad.

Eugene Pilon, 48 Green Bay, suffered several broken ribs when a car being driven by his son skidded off Highway 114 south of Appleton and went into the ditch. Pilon was treated at St. Elizabeth hospital. Captain Steidl warned motorists to drive carefully because of the condition of the roads. He said he received several reports of cars going into ditches in the vicinity of Greenville, but drivers and cars had left before highway officers arrived at the scene.

County Pays Out $16,861 to 842 Aged in November

Total Number of Old Age Pensioners in State Near 50,000

Post-Crescent Madison Bureau
Madison—More than 500 aged persons in Wisconsin joined the old age pension rolls in Wisconsin during November, bringing the total receiving old age benefits under the Wisconsin social security law to slightly under 50,000.

During the month the rolls added more than 900 new names, but 400 others were dropped for death or other causes, so that the net increase was approximately 500. Actual number of pension beneficiaries at the beginning of December was 49,507, according to monthly statistics released by the state public welfare department.

The old age pensioners received during November a total of $1,077,921, while the total paid out to old age pensioners, children, and blind, was $1,581,022 for the month.

Counties in the Fox River Valley area generally grant pensions which are lower than the state-wide average of $21.54 a month, the pension department reported.

Here are the figures on average monthly payments, the total number of beneficiaries, and the amount of payments in the northeastern Wisconsin counties for November:

Railroad Granted Truck Line Permit

Public Service Board Decision Sets Precedent in Wisconsin

Post-Crescent Madison Bureau
Madison—Broad changes in railroad policy in Wisconsin were foreseen today as the result of a decision authorizing the Kewaunee, Green Bay and Western railroad to operate supplementary truck lines to improve its transportation service. The decision, an affirmation of a previous order, was announced Friday by the Wisconsin public service commission.

The decision was significant because it was the first of its kind in the state, and may bring additional applications for similar extensions of service through common carrier facilities by other Wisconsin roads. It was also important because in the commission denied a contention advanced by the trucking interests that the railroads are required to show public convenience and necessity before they can be allowed to operate truck lines in competition with the regular common carrier lines.

The order permits the Green Bay road to operate trucks from Green Bay to Sturgeon Bay as a supplementary service, but does not allow the road to extend its services into territories or routes not now served by rail.

"This is not a new and additional service," the commission opinion said in reply to truckers' protests. "It is merely the substitution of a more efficient and more economical means of performing a service which the applicants are already authorized to perform."

Commenting on the truckers' fear that railroad truck competition would ruin their traffic business, the commission asserted that the approval of railroads' supplementary truck services would not be de-

Prizes at schmeer were won by Harvey Carpenter and Maymie Rader and at schafkopf by Arthur Breitman and Alvin Carpenter, and low to Mrs. Earl Reede and Lester Johnson.

Mr. and Mrs. A. J. Falk have returned home from an extended visit at the home of their daughter, Mrs. Louis Werhaen and other relatives and friends in Chicago.

"Hear the Word of the Lord" will be the subject of the sermon which will be preached Sunday evening at the Congregational church by the pastor, the Rev. W. E. Schilling.

structive to motor carrier business generally.

"In this connection, moreover, it should be borne in mind that it is not our function to deny the public the benefit of improvements in transportation service merely because existing carriers will lose some traffic.

"If that were true, very little if any new operating authority could be granted. The motor carriers in the field are no more immune from the hazards arising from progress in the art of transportation than were the forms of transportation which preceded them."

The couple who were so terribly in love...

A Christmas Story

Her name was Martha, and she kept a china pig in the bedroom. Every week she fed it a few coins and gave it an affectionate pat. "Take good care of them," she said, "they're for Tony's Christmas present."

Tony had a bank, too. A red fire house. And he slipped quarters down the chimney when Martha wasn't looking.

When Christmas came Tony put his arms around Martha and said, "I've bought you something beautiful, because you're the loveliest wife in the world. You'll never guess what!"

And she said, "I've bought you something accurate, because you're the most dependable husband in the world. You'll never guess what!" Which is how it happens that they're both wearing Hamiltons now—and why they're more in love than ever.

Yes, that's our story—and it's one which will be repeated a good many times this Christmas. Because Hamilton just is the one gift which sums up all the things we find hard to say to those we love. Come in and see what we mean.

THE PUBLIC MORALITY

One of our contemporary commentators recites the record of recent official misconduct in Wisconsin and asserts that the morality of public servants is ebbing in this state. In both state and local government, it is charged, recent trials and convictions have disclosed a disconcerting concept of public office as private plunder. There are two things to be said on this matter. One is that graft and corruption in public office is in no way novel, as even the most cursory glance at the ungarished history of the world and our own nation will quickly teach. From the middle ages onward, when men bought offices in government with the hope and intention of reaching deeply and profitably into the purses of the governed after they got them, down to the beginnings of our own colonial life when English adventurers came to American shores to become governors with empty pockets and returned in a few years to become prosperous knights of the realm, we have had it.

The second is that in a democratic society the quality of government and governors is a responsibility of citizenship. Politics and government are inevitably one, and politics is a slice of life. By and large the people choose their prototypes to office. Indeed it is a principle of democracy that in the long run the people choose the right men to office. Thus an alert, conscious, and enlightened citizenry is fundamental and prerequisite to good government. Mere recitation of examples of misgovernment, without reminders of popular responsibility, are therefore futile.

We have the wrong men in public office for precisely the same basic reasons that we have excessive taxation, profligate and irresponsible public spending, excessively large growths of government bureaucracy, and other current and accustomed evils.

It is in fact, a vicious circle. The people don't pay enough attention to their government. The wrong men get into public office. Government grows so big, so complicated and confused, that the people are not able, are no longer willing to muster the mental energy, to keep informed on their government and its affairs. Then we have bitter mumbling about crooks in public office and wondering how they got there.

"YE SHALL KNOW THE TRUTH"

Russia blindly says it cannot accept mediation of the war in Finland because there is no war.

It is only trying to free the Finnish people as it has freed the Estonians and as it, no doubt, intends to free the Norwegians and Swedes.

The trait of calling black white with a straight face is an old Communist tactic, a brother to the Trojan horse.

The workless Daily Worker, Red newspaper of New York, continues upon this same pathway, whether because it thinks it is smart or the human oxen who accept its dope are too thick skulled to understand, we do not know.

But the Worker says that Mr. Roosevelt is really to blame for the war on the Finns. It explains that when he sent a request to Moscow asking it to do nothing to interfere with Finnish independence his action was interpreted as "a go ahead signal for the collaboration of the Finnish ruling circles with the British war intrigues." The Worker also gets Wall Street by the hair of the head and drags it in as a Roosevelt stooge, and blasts the American newspapers as "determined to drug the intelligence of the American people, to paralyze all common sense questioning in a wave of war hysteria aimed at the Soviet union."

Someone is stark, raving mad.

AFTER THE CHEWING:

The campaign of the mayor of New York city to restrain the discarding of wads of chewed chewing gum in public places will find sympathetic endorsement from one end of the country to the other. The nuisance to which he refers is scarcely peculiar to New York.

Probably there is not a city, town, village or hamlet in the United States where one could not experience the unpleasant feeling of unexpectedly stepping upon an abandoned bit of gum on the sidewalk with its resulting, amazingly adhesive qualities being demonstrated upon the sole of one's shoe; or of finding innumerable hardened wads stuck to the bottom of soda store tables, and other places.

Undoubtedly it is the right of every free born citizen to chew gum in public. There should be no attempt to interfere with that enjoyment. However, it is a matter of decorum and sanitation to protect the unsuspecting from stepping or sitting on it, after one has finished chewing it.

THE RETURN OF HIAWATHA

Where, it has often been asked, has 'Lo, the poor Indian gone—the vanishing American who roamed this part of the world, untrammelled and trodding the wilds of his own domain?

The popular conception has been that his numbers have been diminishing rapidly and soon he would no longer be distinguishable as one of a race. Now it seems he has not gone anywhere, he is not vanishing, and, in fact, he is coming back, not merely numerically but in the matter of readjusting himself to the new kind of civilization that took the land from him.

Probably the statement of John Collier, United States Commissioner of Indian Affairs, will be most interesting to the greatest number for the comment that Indians are developing "surprising capacities" as business men. Until about 1928, Mr. Collier said, the death rate of the Indians equalled or exceeded the birth rate. . . . "Indians today are the fastest growing population in the United States."

The last statement is surprising enough in itself, but it is probably news to a majority that Indians are to be found in all of the 48 states, have extensive land holdings in 27 states amounting to more than 52,000,000 acres and are increasing these holdings. Furthermore, they have developed salmon canneries, community farms, tourist enterprises, a municipal water project and even an oyster refinery.

Since the treatment handed the Indians does not make pleasant reading to the majority of students of early American history, the news of their rehabilitation will undoubtedly be welcomed, for the reason that they are no longer tomahawk carriers or lazy dependents, but are taking a productive part in the American civilization.

A SAVIOUR IN ANY LAND

Unfortunately, expressions of humanitarianism are sometimes mere lip service. But there is no vestige of reason to doubt the sincerity of the statement of Charles Vaillant whose death is reported from Paris. "I have done what I could for my fellowmen. Surely I could not refuse to give what I had." Or, "What is my life compared with the health of millions? For them I gladly give it."

Confirmation of his sincerity is found in several facts, one of which although his name is little known to the average layman, untold lives have been saved because of his sacrifices and his work. A radiologist, the development of the x-ray, virtually as it is known today, is due to his efforts.

Vaillant never earned a yearly salary of more than $800. Almost at the point of scientific recognition he was doomed with the results of his own research. Sometime in his experiments the powerful ray had burned through the tissues of his flesh. The dreaded cancer had set in. From then on followed operation after operation. First a finger, then an arm. Slowly his body was eaten away, but he continued his work until complete disability stopped him.

It is a commentary upon this man's life that a reporter recording his death the other day wrote, "The cravat of the Legion of Honor was bestowed upon him. . . . The Carnegie Hero Medal was pinned on his hospital nightshirt. . . . The Gold Medal of the City of Paris was placed by his side."

This poverty stricken research doctor, no great politician or saviour of France, was nevertheless a benefactor of mankind deserving of tribute in any land, by any tongue.

MADMOISELLE FROM ARMENTIERES

Reporters were bound to look up Mademoiselle from Armentieres, the young woman whose manners and methods brought the super-publicity of a wartime melody to her doors. There will be other mademoiselles for this war but until their niche in history is carved the correspondents were bound to start with the old one even as a surveyor looks for an undisputed monument from which to commence making his measurements.

Mademoiselle was only 25 with a great shock of black hair and a good job as bar girl in a little cafe at Armentieres when the German artillery started rumbling over French roads. She is now 50, the wife of a truck driver, living in a village not far from the historical spot where her fame originated. A British sergeant back there in 1914 glimpsed her in all her wondrous beauty deftly filling the beer mugs and wrote his panting song. But today, alas, Mademoiselle now turned Madame, has no red cherries in her cheeks, but is haggard and wracked with a cough from inhaling a bit of that odorous German gas.

The other day the maid of Armentieres discussed the great song that was built around her and said she heard that certain ribald parodies had displaced the first fervent verses. Ribald is a soft and kindly word. We fear this twentieth century Jean d'Arc has never heard the half of them.

In the Bessemer process, pure iron ore is obtained by blowing a blast of ordinary air on molten pig iron.

DALE HARRISON'S
In Old New York

New York—The season of year-end reviews being at hand, we shall soon be surfeited with the ten best this and that. There is no particular sense in this annual American pastime, but it helps pass the time.

One man's caviar is another man's corn pone. My list of 1939 "Bests" wouldn't necessarily coincide with yours. The only purpose in making such a list is to permit you the high enjoyment of either violent disagreement or approval; and it has the further advantage, from a reader's standpoint, of giving him an idea of the tastes and distastes of the writer.

Here then are the 1939 "Bests" as I found them in New York.

Movies: "Pygmalion." "Goodbye, Mr. Chips," "Ninotchka," "Mr. Smith Goes to Washington," and "Harvest" (French).
Drama: "Margin for Error" and "The Primrose Path."

Comedy: "Life With Father," "Skylark," "See My Lawyer."

Musical: "Too Many Girls."

Revue: "Streets of Paris."

Play-of-the-Year: "Life With Father."

Best Popular Song: (I'm ashamed of myself) "Well, All Right."

Best Night Club Show: Diamond Horseshoe.

Best stage performance: Katharine Hepburn in "The Philadelphia Story," Howard Lindsay and Dorothy Stickney in "Life With Father," Margo in "The World We Make."

Funniest fellows (night clubs): Frank Libuse (Diamond Horseshoe), Senator Ford (Rainbow Room), and Jack White, Frankie Hyers and Pat Harrington at Club 18.

Funniest fellows (theatre): Abbott and Costello (Streets of Paris) and Olsen and Johnson (Hellzapoppin').

Surest fire entertainer: Eddie Davis of Leon and Eddie's (this has been going on for years).

Best Book: No nomination. I didn't do much reading this year.

Best Recordings (popular): "Wizard of Oz" album with Judy Garland, Hal Kemp's "Love For Sale" (with Nat Wynn vocal), Russ Morgan's smart setting of "Wabash Blues"—really something to listen to—and all the Alce Templer recordings.

Best Recordings (classical): The album of "American Music for Orchestra" (Rochester Symphony Orchestra), album of "Scenes from 'Abe Lincoln in Illinois'" by Raymond Massey, and Bob Macginsey's "To My Mother" as sung by John Charles Thomas.

Best championship fight: Garcia-Apostoli.

People and Places: That was Pater Ven Steeden, Fred Allen's orchestra leader, standing in the front row of a group of men before the bulletin board of a Sixth Avenue Employment Agency, studying the "Male Help Wanted" list.

I have never seen longer lines than those which formed for nearly a block along West 56th Street, waiting patiently in the cold to get into the Music Hall to see "Ninotchka." . . . I'll bet a penny that half of the people in line couldn't pronounce the name of the picture, and that 75 per cent of them couldn't spell it. . . .

All middle aged men who think it is smart to be pals with their teen age sons and daughters can see how silly they are by observing what an ass Father makes of himself in the George Abbott farce, "Ring Two." . . . The "Hitterbug" soda has appeared in Harlem—eight fruit flavors, a scoop of chocolate ice cream, and crushed nuts in balls of whipped cream. . . . The Sunday evening jam sessions at Hickory House are modestly called "Bang" Nights. . . . Mrs. Dwight Morrow, never one for after-dark frivolity, is a frequent drop-in at the Pegasus Club, near Rockefeller, N. Y., to listen to the songs of Ramon Armengod from Mexico City where, as wife of the American Ambassador, Mrs. Morrow once resided. . . .

Blue Barron's band is one of the few without a girl vocalist. The reason: Blue is afraid of "love trouble" among his musicians whose average age is 19, which is the romantic age (and so is 25, 35, 45, et cetera). . . . There is a white haired man and his gray haired wife who never seem to tire of night clubbing. I don't know who can't see them at one or more of the better spots, dancing the rhumba as enthusiastically as the younger people, though I get the impression, watching him, that the elderly gentleman is slightly creaky on the bumps. . . .

Looking Backward

10 YEARS AGO

Saturday, Dec. 14, 1929

Hack Wilson, slugging outfielder of the Chicago Cubs, that day intimated he may abandon plans to meet Arthur Shires, first baseman of the Chicago White Sox, in a boxing match proposed in Chicago.

The Appleton Pure Milk company had opened branch distributing centers at Kaukauna, and Neenah-Menasha.

An attempt was to be made by the National Broadcasting company to pick up Christmas programs in England, Germany and Holland and rebroadcast them to the United States.

25 YEARS AGO

Saturday, Dec. 19, 1914

Christmas vacation began at Appleton Public schools and Lawrence college the previous day.

A beautiful Chinese pheasant was being stuffed and mounted by Michael Wagner for Luther Lindauer of Kaukauna. The bird had a tail that measured over 3 feet. Wagner already had mounted more than 25 deer heads that season.

The Atlas theater had been sold the previous day by R. Hogman to Harry Wright of Evansville, Wis.

Doc Meanwell's Badger five defeated Lawrence college basketball team by a score of 29 to 21 Friday evening in a game which was close until the final minutes of play. The starting lineup for Lawrence was composed of Thompson, Hooley, Johnson, Tippet and Witt-huhn.

A Verse for Today

By Anne Campbell

WHEN YOU COME BACK

When you come back, will you bring with you The magic of old years,

The sunlit track and the skies of blue, The morning without fears?

Will you come with that joyous dewy look That you had long ago?

With the youthful courage that would not brook The frowning friend or foe?

When you come home, will your blue eyes hold The same clear light for me?

And will you come with the heart of gold That loved me tenderly?

The years are long since you went away, And sorry and changed the town,

But the sun will spare you a pretty ray For the path you're dancing down!

When you come back, will you bring along The gladness we used to share,

The joy I lack, the lilting song, The freedom from all care?

And being together again, we'll learn That life has no better prize

Than the day of a dear old friend's return— The welcome in friendly eyes!

A Bystander
In Washington

BY PRESTON GROVER

Washington—Under our foreign policy of moral indignation we are taking in a heap of territory.

In the course of a year or so we have got the Japanese, the Germans, Italians, and Russians barking at us for one reason or another, most of South and Central America considers us a fairly good sort of neighbor but Mexico grows cooler and cooler as the time approaches when she must deal with the United States, nation to nation, over the oil and land seizures instead of dealing alone with the dispossessed American owners.

One jolly suggestion is that if we get mad at numbers of nations in all directions we won't have time to get mad enough at any one to start whanging at it.

Making Friends

Officially, we express our disposition in odd ways. We send a telegram of congratulations to President Vargas of Brazil on his escape from an assassin, but when a bomb assassinates Hitler no telegram is sent to say we are glad. We fulfill the bare diplomatic necessities by "signing the book" in the foreign office at Berlin.

In November, Russia celebrates the anniversary of the beginning of the Soviet Republic. We send no note of congratulations. In December Finland celebrates her anniversary of independence from Russia and we send an expression of "wholehearted esteem."

We give rather brusque notice to Japan of our intention to abrogate our commercial treaty, and follow it up by increasing naval and air forces at Honolulu.

How Dull The Busy Bee?

Come domestic strife or fierce foreign war, the Bureau of Standards proceeds on its quiet way studying the common things of life. It cautions that wool may be injured by sunburn even while on the back of sheep. It makes no mention of umbrellas for sheep. Instead, it worries about the amount of glass which dissolves from the inside of bottles containing food or liquid materials. We could say something tart on that last subject but you may have thought of it already.

The bureau pauses for no such frivolities but goes right on conducting tests on the wearability of silk stockings and floor bricks for sewers. Such application of science to the common things of life.

Tell It To A Woman

We can't conclude without telling you of the sorrowful experience of Hans Thomsen, charge d'affaires at the German embassy. Reporters about town have found him an important source of background material. He has talked freely with the tacit understanding that nothing would be attributed directly to him.

But a gal society reporter, unversed in the ways of diplomatic reporting, found herself short of a story one day and went out to talk to him. He evidently talked freely and she printed the whole works, brightened by her own horrified comments at this and that. As a story it was a woe. The embassy put out a flat denial on it next day.

Who should call up the girl but the French ambassador, complimenting her on such an exploit. "I have cabled the whole story to my government," he said gleefully.

Just a Step Behind the News

By Dave Boone

The war is getting to look a good deal like a war. A British fleet has had a hot battle over Heligoland. A German fleet is reported in the North sea, and allied warships are hunting to keep the Admiral Graf von Spleen from escaping. Urgent is the need of the Graf Spee to repair the damage which Berlin says she didn't suffer.

The big question therefore is how long it takes to fix up a ship that wasn't touched (unless you see the actual photographs).

I suppose the German newspapers printed those photographs over a line reading, "Arrows mark spots where Spee wasn't struck."

The 1939 pettiness prize goes to the folks who are sneering at Herbert Hoover's part in the relief drive to aid Finland. It's a new low even in the political arena. Hoover has a big name in international charities before his critics were even moderately well known.

If there's anything smaller than heaving rocks into a relief drive, you name it.

SOMETHING IS ROTTEN AND NOT IN DENMARK EITHER

Under the Capitol Dome

BY JOHN WYNGAARD

Madison—If, as rumor has it, the leaders of the Progressive party are anxious to have John Thiel of Mayville get the nomination for governor next year, that leadership will be proving a suspicion held by some observers and also by some of the sharper members of the party's rank and file.

It is the opinion of many Progressive politicians that there are better men, better vote-getters, and men who are better equipped to handle the party's rank and file.

Thiel's record as a small-town politician is eminent enough. He is a leading attorney of the small Dodge county community, and he was district attorney for a couple of terms.

An intimate crony and an unflinching follower of Phil LaFollette, Thiel left his law office and took the $7,000 salary as director of the tax commission after the LaFollette reorganization bill had put a couple of Progressive politicians on the commission proper.

When Thiel came to Madison his attitude about state service brought a public eye-brow to some observers. He was fond of reminding others that a $7,000 salary wasn't very attractive to a successful lawyer, and that he did not look forward to holding the job very long. At the same time he told colleagues in state office that a term as state tax head would supply valuable background and prestige for a tax lawyer.

Thiel's record in the commission office made few headlines. His best-remembered achievement, before the Heil regime overtook him and returned him involuntarily to his law office, was a shortening of the personal income tax forms, a suggestion which had been made years earlier by scores of taxpayers who had struggled with the previous versions.

Now there are authoritative whispers about that Thiel is the fair-haired boy of the LaFollette circle. If he is, it can be predicted that a lot of other high-ranking Progressives who have built state-wide records and party followings are going to be mighty angry, and if he is, some Progressives outside of that circle are going to be wondering why a comparatively obscure party man should win such favor.

8TH DISTRICT PLAN

Second biggest congressional district in the state is the Eighth, which includes a part of the populous Fox river valley. The district also contains some important Republican politicians. Therefore a suggestion recently adopted at a district conference may have some influence in shaping the course of the Republican delegate campaigns in the rest of the state during coming weeks. The conference voted to steer away from endorsements of candidates, and invited all delegate candidates and campaign managers to stay away until some time in January when the district organization will meet to endorse formally its choice for the presidential nomination and its candidates for delegates.

Thus far there are four separate delegate campaigns underway, plus the efforts of Roy Reed of Ripon and Congressman Kaefer to promote an untruncated slate. If the number of names and the spirit of their

Personal Health Talks

BY WILLIAM BRADY, M. D.

NUTRITION IMPAIRED

A business man has suffered for fifteen years from a trick diagnosis of gastrointestinal neurasthenia. The trick diagnosis was made by a "leading" doctor, the business man assures me, but in this instance I suspect the doctor led with his chin. Altho the poor man has consulted many specialists and visited many sanitariums, health resorts, and taken various sorts of non-medical treatments well (which I infer means he has had considerable truck with charlatans and vendors of mechanical and psychological nostrums), of course nothing has ever given him benefit. Sometimes he does feel a little better, but he soon relapses. He has to neglect his business a good share of the time.

Acids, starches, fats, meats and sweets disagree with him, he says. Likewise milk and eggs.

Boy, that's tough going, trying to choose something good to eat without including any of the items proscribed.

Just what the man means when he says something "disagrees with him" is a delicate question which one can scarcely venture to dwell on. I wonder if it is anything like mashed potato. There's an item I wouldn't mind if I had an allergy to. They make me eat some mashed potato with my turkey once when I was a little boy.

What is the result. I have a fur-tail seizure if any one attempts to foist mashed potato on me, and for turkey, you can have all of it, I'll take a hot dog or any other fish or meat and thank you. Oh, I can eat turkey if my mind is on something else, but I'd have to be terribly hungry before I'd voluntarily push a gob of mashed potato down my throat.

The business man assures me that many of the many doctors and specialists have found any organic trouble to account for his condition. As nearly as I can understand it, his condition is a chronic progressive introspection. His mind never gets far off from his stomach, liver, and other bits of internal machinery.

Now if I were the business man's doctor and had absolute control of the patient I'd treat him just as I'd treat all the sufferers from the constipation habit. I'd take the constipation victim to an isolated place, an island preferably, where they could not possibly get any physic, give 'em plenty of plain wheat, some vegetables, fruit, meat, pie, tea, coffee, milk, and say "So long—I'll be seeing you in a week." I'd expect to find 90 per cent of them cured in a week. It generally takes five days for nature to resume control when the physic is stopped.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

Sacro-Iliac Geography

Please tell me where the sacro-iliac joints are, and what bones are joined in these joints? I can find no mention of them in a college textbook on anatomy used when I was a student. (O.P.)

Answer—They are not joints in the usual sense of the word, but rather junctions. Joints admit of motion; junctions are rigid unions. Medical term of union between sacrum (base of spine) and wing of flank bone (illum) of hip or pelvis.

efforts is the gauge. The Dewey backers are now out in front in Wisconsin. If the prestige of their names, and their experience and age, is counted, the Vandenberg men are ahead. Little is heard about Taft delegates, while Congressman Hawks' boom for Mr. Bridges has evaporated, as far as anyone can see.

vis is sacro-iliac sychronosis (without cartilage). Controversy long waged between regular medicine and osteopathy over question of mobility in sacro-iliac junction; osteopathy finally won, and slight mobility in the normal sychronodrosis now recognized. If you place hands on hips with tips of index fingers on "hip bones" your thumbs will be directly over sacro-iliac junctions.

There must be many readers of your column who need just such sound guidance—but will they stop to ask for it when they contemplate seeking treatment by such a charlatan? (Mrs. C. M.)

Answer—Probably not. They generally swallow the quack's bait first and later investigate.

Where They Came From

Christmas Carols

Christmas hymns written to dance tunes during the days of Rome are predecessors of the Christmas carol, which had spread widely in England by the 15th century. The German Weihnachtslieder and the French Noel of the 11th century had the same origin. The "Boar's Head Carol" found in the first printed collection from the press of Wynkynde Worde (1521) is still sung at Oxford. The Puritans discouraged carols and predicted their disappearance.

Washington Has Strange Reactions Over Naval Battle

Many Hope That Decisive British Victory Will Hasten Peace

BY DAVID LAWRENCE
Washington—Strange are the reactions which the British-German naval battle in the South Atlantic makes on official Washington. Some are disturbed over the violation of the neutrality zone in international waters. Others are worried over the complications that may ensue if German raiders operate so closely to North and South American ports. But, looking at the episode objectively, there are many who derive the hope that a decisive victory by the British in clearing the seas will hasten the day when peace negotiations may be begun.

The surprise of the British fleet has been closely interwoven with the effectiveness of the blockade upon Germany. Press dispatches from Berlin and broadcasts indicate clearly that the German people are being led to believe that British sea power is being seriously challenged and that hence any hardships undergone in Germany may eventually be vindicated by a triumph over British shipping.

The huge supply of British tonnage, against which the German submarines have to date made a relatively negligible dent compared to the last war, makes improbable the hopes of success in starving the British Isles. Likewise, the remarkably good defensive work of the British air forces shows that air attacks are by no means as dangerous to the allies as has hitherto been believed or as the German people have been led to think.

The British naval strategy has necessarily been strained to the utmost in the first few weeks of the war, with so many thousands of square miles to patrol and with the opportunities for German submarines and floating mines to do a sniping job, against which no navy could probably protect itself completely.

Use Of Airplanes
What the operations in the Atlantic may yet reveal is how useful the airplane can be as an instrument of reconnaissance in connection with a fleet, and undoubtedly the British warships equipped with airplanes have done scouting to locate the pocket battleships and are in position to find the hiding places of German raiders.

The time is not far distant now when German commerce raiders will be cleared from the South Atlantic, either in proximity to the African or South American coast, and this, too, had to be done in the last war before the British could afford to detach some of the vessels they had in outlying stations and bring them back to the European petrel.

As evidence accumulates that the British are to remain in control of the seas, the moral effect on the German people of another prolonged battle with economic starvation will be noticeable in a renewal of discussion of peace. There is always the possibility that the British themselves, as they get the upper hand in the sea war, will reopen the peace negotiations, for they would not then be in a position of petitioning for peace under conditions adverse to their own prestige, which would have been the case in the last few weeks had they entertained the peace proposals which have emanated repeatedly from Berlin.

Hope For Peace
The sudden aggression by the Soviets upon Finland has strengthened an underlying hope here that peace is not far distant for Europe as a whole. It is assumed that the conservative classes in Germany cannot be enjoying what is going on in the Baltic any more than are the British or the Scandinavians. Heretofore, Scandinavian friendship has been valuable to Germany in the matter of relaying supplies from the outer world. But, with Norway and Sweden both apprehensive that Russia may swoop down further into the Baltic, the Germans must find themselves ill at ease among their own friends in Scandinavia. For, whether the Russo-German alliance is or is not a good thing now for Germany, Scandinavian public opinion places upon the nazis full responsibility for initiating a partnership which permitted the aggression on Finland to be consummated.

With all the neutrals of the European world nervous about aggression and sympathies all on one side—a contrast to the last war—the governments of the smaller countries are unquestionably active in trying to bring about peace. It has been said officially in London that peace talk is going on in neutral quarters all the time. These efforts no doubt will be intensified if the British can demonstrate their naval and air supremacy in the next few weeks over vast areas in the Atlantic which have hitherto been traversed by German commerce raiders. If the German people are to be compelled to fight a long struggle against an effective blockade, their economic situation will compel peace, and the British no doubt are expecting some such move, for it is an interesting though unexplained fact that the British are not buying any more war supplies than they require for current needs—their buying policies indicating not a long war, but an early peace.

Merchants at Weyauwega Sponsor Christmas Party

Weyauwega—Merchants of the city, through the Weyauwega Dividend Day association, sponsored a Christmas party Saturday afternoon at Gerold's hall, with Girl Scouts in charge of the children. Free motion picture were among the features, and Santa Claus was to distribute sacks of candy, nuts and fruits.

The Weyauwega public schools' Christmas vacation will be from Friday, Dec. 22, to Jan. 8. Its calendar is crowded with activities. Thursday evening the Dramatic club banquet was held in the school gymnasium.

On Monday evening the Latin club will hold its Christmas party. The high school Christmas party will take place Thursday beginning at 7:30 in the evening. Advices Isolation For Common Colds

City Physician Warns Against Spreading Germs in Crowds

Because of the prevalence of common colds, Dr. F. J. Huberty, city physician and health officer, today cautioned those with colds to stay away from crowded places and isolate themselves as much as possible. Those who have missed getting a cold so far would do well to stay away from contacts with others who have them and start treatment with the first signs of an oncoming cold, the doctor said.

The physician said the greatest fault in semi-mild weather is not wearing clothes heavy enough for the season. A chill very often leads to a cold which may develop other problems by weakening the resistance to germs. Severe cases should be their family physicians, he said. Dr. Huberty said no cases of influenza have been reported to him so far this fall in direct contrast to last year when the disease was prevalent in Appleton in November and December. Influenza usually occurs, he said, when the weather grows mild and slushy after a cold spell.

State Needs Cooperation of Cheese Industry in Campaign

Post-Crescent Madison Bureau
Madison—Unless the cheese industry takes steps to advance the possibilities of small package natural cheese sales which the department's Christmas sales campaigns in the last two years have unquestionably proved exist, the department of agriculture and markets will discontinue its holiday cheese sales campaign next year, Director Ralph E. Ammon said today.

Ammon pointed out that the department this year was embarrassed by a flood of orders which it finds impossible to fill because of the scarcity of cheese fit for wrapping in small packages for the holiday gift trade. Although department agents have orders which will approximate a million pounds by the end of the Christmas season, there will be only about 400,000 pounds on hand, he said.

The department head pointed out that the shortage of cheese to fill orders on hand was not the fault of the cheese industry, but was brought about by unexpected rises in the cheese market during the summer.

Prices Rise
Sudden and strong advances in cheese prices last summer persuaded cheese-makers to sell their stocks instead of holding them for the Christmas trade, despite the premium prices assured for the latter.

Ammon asserted that it is up to cheesemakers now to organize to promote further the sale of cheese in small package form. He recalled that about a year ago he had discussed the formation of a cheese sales cooperative with cheese makers and suggested that the sales drive conducted during the last two seasons may give some impetus to that idea. He reported that the department this year found it had to deal with dozens of small cheesemakers because there is no single large Wisconsin natural cheese distributor. Ultimately, he said, if the small package cheese marketing idea catches on, the department hopes to be able to arrange uniform marketing under a state brand and a state-sponsored package. Such methods have already been discussed by leaders of the industry and state officials, and experiments in packing have been made under authority of the state board of agriculture.

Council Expected To Adopt Law for Extension of Tax

Half of Taxes May Be Extended Under Proposed Ordinance

Appleton property owners again will have an opportunity to lighten their tax burdens by paying only half of their taxes and extending the payment of the remainder to July 31 if the city council adopts a proposed ordinance.

Aldermen have referred the ordinance to the ordinance committee and ordered the law published. It will be before the city council for adoption at the first meeting in January.

Joseph A. Kox, city treasurer, said there are only two changes from the ordinance adopted last year. One, the interest charge has been reduced from 1 per cent to a half of 1 per cent and the other, personal property tax payments may be extended along with real estate taxes. Last year only real estate taxes could be extended.

The ordinance permits property owners to extend 50 per cent of their real estate and personal property taxes from March 1 to July 31, by paying the first 50 per cent before the deadline. The city will pay the extended portion to the county and will collect an interest charge of only a half of 1 per cent.

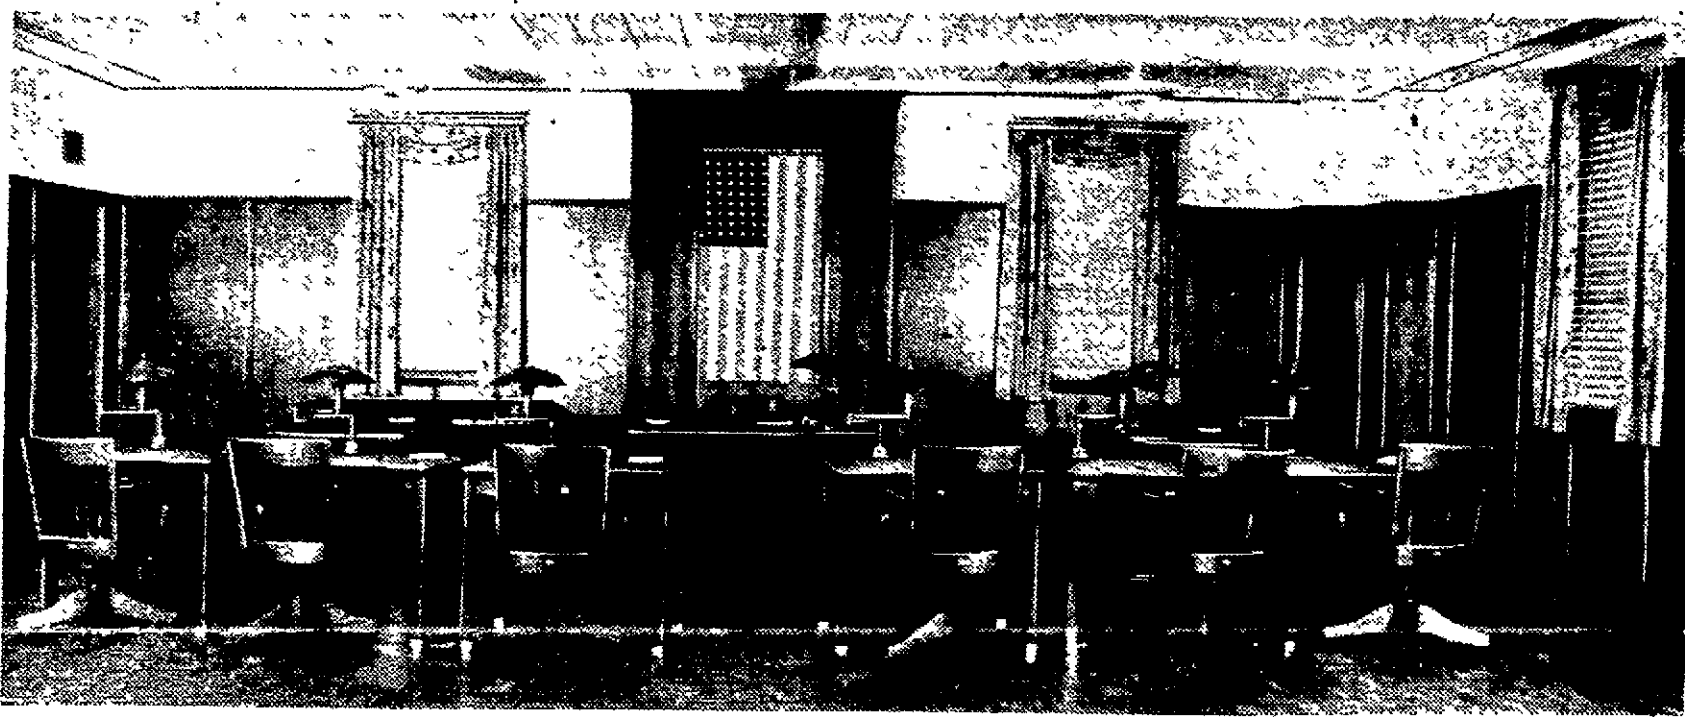

Special assessments, however, charged against property for various improvements, must be paid along with the first 50 per cent of the real estate and personal property taxes, the treasurer said.

Extended tax payments which are not paid on or before July 31 will be declared delinquent and will be subject to the interest charge and the sale of lands as provided in the Wisconsin statutes.

The extension privilege has been proposed for the convenience of taxpayers who have difficulty in raising the full amount of their bills the first part of the year and gives them a chance to pay their taxes in two installments.

The city treasurer and his staff are preparing the tax bills which will be placed in the mail the day after Christmas. The collection will begin at 9 o'clock Wednesday morning, Dec. 27, at city hall.

Former Regional Chief of Board Says He Was Told to Make Industry 'Fear Him'

He told me that he was the wrong position and said 'you should make them fear you and the board.'

"I said 'Fred, nuts.'"

Krivonos, who was seated at a nearby table, laughed at the testimony and went on making notes.

Edwin S. Smith, a member of the national labor relations board, described as "nonsense" today a suggestion by Edmund M. Toland, counsel for a house investigating committee, that Smith has been "prejudiced and biased" in favor of the CIO.

In inquiring into Smith's 1936 interest in a strike at the Berkshire Knitting Mills at Reading, Pa., committee members were told by the witness that his only interest was to help settle the strike.

Toland asked:

"Isn't it a fact that you thought the C. I. O. an industrial union, was the best type of union for this country?"

"I don't think there is any implication that can be drawn from this whole incident that established that fact," Smith replied.

"Isn't it a fact," Toland then inquired, "that you have been personally prejudiced and biased in the performance of your duties in behalf of the C. I. O.?"

"I think that's nonsense, Mr. Toland," the labor board member replied crisply.

Toland then placed in the record a memorandum, seized from the board's files, from David J. Sappos, labor board economist, to Smith, on March 30, 1937. It said that Sappos had "just now got to the draft of your speech" to be delivered before the National Conference of Social Work.

"I question the wisdom of a member of the board taking sides in the C. I. O.-A. F. of L. controversy at the present time," Sappos wrote, "particularly in a written speech."

"Although my sympathies are well-known, I think it is not good policy for an agency like our board to publicly place itself on record as endorsing the position of one side or another."

Good Fellows Must Hustle To Live Up to Their Names

With only one week until Christmas, the Good Fellows fund has received only $100 of the $700 necessary to provide needy Appleton families with gifts, baskets on Christmas eve.

The estimate of $700 is not padded. It is the minimum which must be received in order to provide the baskets for families in the city who are in such reduced circumstances that their Christmas would be barren without this gesture.

Every day the Post-Crescent receives calls from people calling attention to other families who are in need of a share of the Good Fellows' help. If the Good Fellows of the city contribute more than the minimum of $700, the additional money will mean additional happiness among the city's families who are financially unable to buy anything "extra" at Christmas time, who would ordinarily have no more on Christmas eve than at any other time.

Americans assume that Christmas is a bountiful period for all Americans. But there are many American homes, and Appleton has its share, in which Christmas means very little in its material benefits except through the kindness and generosity of organizations like the Good Fellows.

At a meeting of a charitable organization in Appleton this week, it was found that the cost of an average Christmas basket like those distributed by the Good Fellows is $4.15. Thus a Good Fellow who contributes an amount approximating that figure is bringing Christmas cheer to an entire family.

If Good Fellows are not numerous enough in Appleton to contribute $700, it will mean that some of the families now on the Good Fellow list will not receive baskets. And all those homes are desperately in need of help at this time of year.

Join the ranks of the Good Fellows and know on Christmas eve that you have not only done your best for your own family and friends, but that you have remembered a home that without your thoughtfulness would have been forgotten.

Honor Roll of Good Fellows

Not more than 30 families could be given baskets with the Good Fellows' contributions received up to noon today. With only a week remaining the fund will have to be swelled by at least $600 to do just a little for the more than 200 families that will have no Christmas unless it is provided by the Good Fellows. Contributions up to noon totaled $35.50.

'No Meal' Decree Cuts Number Of Transient Lodgers at Jail

Transients are getting little encouragement to journey into Outagamie county for a night's stay at the county jail this winter.

The county board at its November session placed a limit of 10 cents on each breakfast served to knights of the road given lodging at the jail, and Sheriff John Lappen, who claims the amount is too small, has been giving out no meals. Lappen states that the sting of meals increases the number of "lodgers" and requires the services of a man to keep the place clean. The small allowance on meals does not warrant such an expense, he said.

From five to fifteen transients are calling at the jail for lodging each night, and this number is small compared to last winter when the number sometimes was as high as thirty and thirty-five.

A number of familiar faces given lodging at the jail in past winters have not been seen so far this season, and reports say they are traveling other "circuits." The mild weather also may be a factor in the small numbers seeking lodging. A number of knights of the road during the last few years were longshoremen, and with shipbuilding active at Manitowoc, there are few of these men "legging" it in this area.

Boy Sentenced to Industrial School

Allen Triechel, 14, Admits Car Theft Charges In Juvenile Court

Judge Fred V. Henemann in juvenile court this morning sentenced 14-year-old Allen Triechel, Brothers street, Kaukauna, to the State industrial school for boys at Waukesha until he is 21 years of age.

Triechel, arrested by police at Dodgeville last Sunday after a 2-week career of crime with another Kaukauna youth, John Jaeger, 17, admitted the theft of 11 cars. His companion was turned over to Washington county police to face a burglary charge following the arrest of the pair at Dodgeville.

Triechel said that he and Jaeger burglarized several places during a week in which they toured the southern part of the state in a car they stole at Little Chute.

It Is Said--

That the mild weather has delayed construction of the ice palace on Wisconsin avenue by the Wisconsin Avenue Business and Professional association. The work is expected to be started Monday. Original plans were to have the structure completed by Dec. 14.

Few sights have created any more excitement among Appleton's youngest set than the team of Alaskan huskies that appeared in the city this morning, drawing a Santa Claus on a small sled.

The word sled is used advisedly, because there is no snow for runners to glide over. The sled used in this case is also equipped with wheels, which makes it defiant of winter's lastitude. The Santa Claus and his team of dogs was scheduled to make appearances up and down Wisconsin avenue today.

1,100 Youngsters At Morning Movie

Food Goods Received Will Go Into Salvation Army Baskets

A lively crowd of youngsters poured into the Appleton theater this morning for certification of Army's annual benefit movie, the "tickets" being canned goods and other articles of food.

Captain T. A. Raber of the Appleton chapter of the Salvation Army said this afternoon he estimated the crowd at 1,100 and he believed the amount of food received from the children was larger than last year.

The food will be used in providing Christmas baskets for needy families in the city, a project the Salvation Army sponsors every year. Proceeds received in the Christmas kettles on College avenue are used for the same purpose. The chapter is aiming at 100 baskets.

In return for their contributions the youngsters saw a feature picture and three cartoons on this morning's bill.

Plan Next Step In County Milk Quality Program

Bi-Weekly Reports on Product Will be Given Producers

Bi-weekly reports of sediment and methylene blue tests by all milk plants in Outagamie county to their patrons will be the next step in the dairy quality program launched recently in the county, according to J. F. Magnus, county agricultural agent.

These reports will show farmers the progress they are making in the production of clean milk. The state department of agriculture inspectors will call at all plants to see that plant operators are doing their part and will be at the call of any farmer who is having difficulty in production of quality milk.

Magnus today expressed his gratitude to the many farmer leaders and plant operators who are contributing their time and efforts in promoting the quality milk program.

The program is designed to meet the competition of other states, hold the present outlets and to gain new markets. With the state legislature furnishing funds with which to advertise Wisconsin milk products, farmers are convinced that this is an opportune time to back up the advertising and promotional campaign with a superior product, Magnus said.

Dry Fall Weather May Cause Winter Damage to Shrubs

Because the weatherman has been predicting rain this fall, trees and shrubs in southern Wisconsin may suffer during the winter.

L. G. Holmes, state extension landscape specialist, in a bulletin to County Agent J. F. Magnus, says that the continued dry weather has brought about a serious shortage of moisture in the state's southern tier of counties. As a result, trees and shrubs will likely suffer from winter injury.

"Lack of moisture in the ground often kills tree and shrub roots by causing them to 'freeze dry,'" Holmes says. "This shows up in the growth above ground. The top of the tree, for example, depends on its roots for food and moisture, and any damage to the root system is going to cause a like amount of top damage, showing up in branches which die back."

He has found that evergreens are "touchy" when it comes to winter injury following a dry summer. Black and red oak, likewise, are temperamental. Old trees, overcrowded and in a weakened condition, can't stand much drought. Among the ornamental evergreens, arbor vitae is most likely to be injured.

Holmes urges thorough watering of ornamental trees and shrubs around the yard before the final freeze-up comes. Where it is possible, he suggests letting the garden hose run in one place for some length of time to give the water plenty of chance to penetrate into the ground. Mulching of shrubbery and trees will help to check winter injury by preventing too deep freezing and loss of soil moisture during the winter.

Pegler Plays at Tax Rules Which Protect Racketeers

Washington—There are errors in the text and administration of the income tax which protect the racketeer and thief but expose the honest citizen to harassment and blackmail and place criminal gains on an equal footing under the law, which should have better morals, with those of legitimate men.

The law itself is at fault, but the internal revenue is not blameless, and I suggest that the next time an agent calls around to use up a citizen's business day combing his return for a problematical shortage of $19 the victim tell him to get the hell out and sink his pick into the accounts of some hoodlum union, where he will be likely to find rich deposits of pay dirt. In this connection I address my respects to reviewing agents who, on reading of the arrogance and shysterism for which their corps is distinguished, spit on their hands and pray that the luck of the draw will deliver into their clutch for vengeance anyone having the audacity to fault them.

This law is indeed wherein it holds that a swindler, for example, who duly reports his income, stating the source and plainly revealing the immoral character of his business, need pay no more than an honest man reporting the same amount. It is said on the law's poor behalf that discrimination in rate between stolen and honest gains would be disbody's theoretical surmise.

The constitution and the law just can't make moral the government's participation in crime as accessory after the fact, although up to now, has been the case. The government for lack of sufficient objection, that not only demands its share of the wages of sin, thus being a potential partner in every profitable crime in the country and an actual partner in many, but, under the bond, of secrecy, withholds information from authorities whose duty it is to prosecute criminals.

Regulations Make U. S. Biggest Mobster of All

It is bad enough that the government of the United States should conspire with the active crook to obstruct the administration of justice, which is a crime in itself. But it is worse that the highest authority in the land should stand on its constitutional right to be silent lest it incriminate and degrade itself.

self. If the government will not testify against its fellow crook, provided it gets the take, Uncle Sam becomes—indeed he is—the greatest mobster in the history of crime, and his morals are indistinguishable from those of Al Capone.

The Capone case and others have advertised the fact that income tax returns are treated as confidential matter, and the result has been a scrupulous, even generous, sharing of dishonest money with the treasury. The government's criminal income is 'way up because the treasury intelligence unit has convinced the underworld that it is interested only in collections. That is no fault of the treasury or the internal revenue, and, because information thus reported goes no further, the department of justice and local authorities are blameless in the matter, too.

Clover Lawn School Plans Yule Program

Bear Creek — A program will be given at Clover Lawn school next Wednesday evening. It will include Christmas songs, dialogues and exercises. Individual numbers will include: "The Old, Old Christmas Story," Reuben Poppe; "Letting the Cat Out of the Bag," William Daggett and Ivan Neilson; song, "My Christmas Dolly," Phyllis Roberts; harmonica solo, "Jingle Bells," Duane Meyer; exercise, "Two Sides," Betty Brisco and Kenneth Nelson; song, "Little Ranch House in Old Circle B," Carol Brisco; harmonica selection, "Cowboy Jack," by Leon Meyer.

But the internal revenue is at fault in its custom of neglecting to inspect the books of labor organizations, which are exempt by definition but probably are not exempt in actual fact. Labor unions are declared to be exempt from income taxes but subject, nevertheless, to inspection to ascertain whether they are legitimate unions or rackets. If they are rackets, then the racketeers are taxable on their exactions and the unions themselves may be taxable, too. However, the internal revenue naively assumes that every organization purporting to be a union is a legitimate union, and makes no inspection unless there is some specific complaint or scandalous publicity indicating that a review of the books would yield a profit.

Do you want to know why unions are not inspected?

Because there are not enough agents to do the work.

There are agents to harass and by resort to slyster interpretations to gyp thousands of legitimate individuals and firms. But there are none to spare for work on the books of rackets which live by unrestrained extortion from employers and workers both.

Officials in Finland said the Finnish army might hold out against Soviet invaders until spring, and for a "long, long time" if adequate military aid arrived. The Red Cross appropriated $250,000 for Finnish war relief.

Stockholm, Sweden—Leaving villages in ashes, the Finns were reported falling back today before the onslaught of Soviet Russian forces in the mining sector of Salmijarvi, key objective in the Soviet Arctic campaign. Briefed by the Finns, the Finns were reported being dynamited and the ice on lakes blasted by the Finns as they prepared to face the enemy further south. The nickel mine properties at Salmijarvi were reported wrecked before the arrival of Russian troops from the Petsamo area.

(A newspaper correspondent at Rovaniemi, south of Salmijarvi, said he watched Finnish engineers lay dynamite charges in the nickel mines, owned chiefly by the International Nickel company of Canada, during the night just before the Finns retreated. He said the Finnish headquarters staff later told him the "entire workings" were blown up.

College Showing Housing Exhibit

Display Shows Development of American, European Units

An art exhibit circulated by the American Federation of Arts, showing the development of American and European group housing units, as well as the development of small houses, is now on display in the halls and alcove of the Lawrence college library. The exhibit, which will be here till the middle of next week, is open to the public.

The exhibit includes interesting portrayals of Frank Lloyd Wright's work, as well as that of Richard Neutra and George Fred Keck. An interesting note in the display is the fact that it shows the shortcomings of American group housing units as compared to those in European countries, although definite improvement is becoming apparent in the American units. The United States is beginning to approach the high level attained in Europe between 1910 and 1930. There are between 50 and 60 pictures in the exhibit.

Professor's Daughter Will Get Unusual Christmas Gift

Evansville, Ill.—(AP)—Santa Claus, it is said, will bring a nine-year-old girl one of the most unusual of Yuletide gifts—a scholarly work by her father treating the day-by-day development during a two-year period of her ability to talk two languages.

The recipient will be Hildegard Leopold, daughter of Dr. Werner F. Leopold, professor of German at Northwestern University. Her Christmas present will be the first of two volumes of a scientific study on the "Speech Development of a Bilingual Child," based on notes educators here believe the most thorough record of its kind.

Much of the doctor's time during the past nine years was devoted to painstaking preparation for this life-time gift for Hildegard. She understands both English and German because her mother has spoken to her exclusively in English while Dr. Leopold has always addressed her in German.

Until Hildegard was two years old Dr. Leopold kept a diary in which he recorded phonetically all words used by the child, with notes on their meanings. When she began to talk more fluently, direct entries were abandoned for weekly summaries. After the child was a year and a half old only new words and constructions were entered.

The investigation disclosed, Dr. Leopold said today, that children lose part of their early vocabulary—in Hildegard's case 53 per cent of her German words, 41 per cent of German-English, and 22 per cent of the English Dr. Leopold said a one-language child would lose less because there would be no shifting, or replacement of words of one language for words of another.

GAMES THIS WEEK
Saturday—Marathon Papers at Ironwood.
Sunday—Marshallfield at Rhineland; Appleton at Kimberly; Marathon Papers at Waukegan (evening); and Marathon Papers at Ontonagon (afternoon).

KIMBERLY—A sellout crowd is assured Sunday afternoon at the clubhouse when the Elm Tree Bakers of Appleton tangle with the Kimberly A. A. cagers. It will be the first league meeting of the two teams and the last home game before Christmas. It will start at 3 o'clock.

The villagers, still smarting under the defeat by the Bakers at the Hartford tournament last spring, are "gunning" for the Appleton team. They will present the same squad which showed last season plus Coach Ray Hamann of the high school and formerly with the Oshkosh All-Stars, and Dreke Van Dyke and Elmer Vanden Boogaard of last year's high school team. Among the veterans who will show are Swen Bowman, veteran center but still one of the best men on the floor, Art Hofkins, guard, the Vander Velden brothers who break through almost any defense, Norb Gossens who pots his shots from the side court, Lefty Dupont, a deceptive player with his southpaw antics, Buck LeMay, the smallest man on the squad but also the craftiest and the coach, and the veteran Joe Gossens who hits the hoop from anywhere.

The Bakers have been working hard for tomorrow's battle because of the village prestige connected with the contest. They appreciate that a win will wipe out the sting of the defeat at the hands of Superior last week. Cliff Burton will be with the squad tomorrow replacing the veteran Louis Grishaber who will be on the sidelines with an injury which will take him to the hospital Monday. Burton aided the Bakers liberally when they defeated Kimberly last spring at the Hartford tournament. Rollie Winter is expected to be ready for competition Sunday having been missing last week. Others on the Baker squad are Eddie Verbrick, Carl Lillge, who does most of the scoring and who will be a close watchman, Tut Gaffney, Mark Cadin, Jr., Orville Wonsler, Eddie Krause, Bob Zuercher, Guy Krumm and Jack Sellers.

Pat Comiskey Is Given Trimming

"Never Was" Cuts Down Boxer Heralded as "Champion of 1940"

New York (AP)—These are hard times for the nation's "white hopes." First, Lou Nova got himself knocked out by Tony Galento. And last night the fabulous Patrick Edward Comiskey of Paterson, N. J., was plastered by Steve Dudas, a crowd-winner before an incredulous crowd at Madison Square garden. Pat is the golden-haired boy who, up to last evening, had knocked out 22 of 24 opponents and was being heralded the "champion of 1941." Now, and probably for his own eventual good, Comiskey has been revealed for what he actually is—a promising 19-year-old heavy-weight, with a fine right hand and a left to learn.

Dudas, who rates only as a tough "trial horse," a surprisingly good performance in winning his decision. The crowd fully expected him to prove another easy victim for the "wonder boy," but instead of living up to the script, he fought like a "title was at stake. He even got up and came back battling after Comiskey's short right hit him down for a nine-count in the fourth that was the only knockdown.

The night's program, billed as a sort of jamboree of "future champions," was somewhat more successful, otherwise. Lew Jenkins knocking out Billy Marquart of Canada in the third round, and Al Davis of Brooklyn took another important stride toward the welterweight title by paralyzing Lefty Larkin of Gardiner, N. J., with a left to the belly in the fifth.

Grinnell Grid Coach Resigns His Position
Grinnell, Ia. (AP)—Trustees of Grinnell college announced yesterday they had accepted the resignation of Guy Lookabaugh, head football coach at the school the last four years.

No reason was given. Neither the board nor the coach would comment. During the four years Lookabaugh's grid teams won 10 games, lost 23 and tied 2.

Lombardi's Snooze Was Oddity Of Oddities in 1939's Sports

BY SID FEDER
NEW YORK (AP)—That weird little snooze Ernie Lombardi took on home plate in the last game of the world series was the oddity of oddities in sport for 1939, sports editors of the nation decided today.

Voting in the Associated Press' ninth annual poll on the "oddest or most freakish incident" of '39, the sports editors awarded the palm to big Ernie in a snooze-in. The Cincinnati Reds' "Snoozola" was top choice of 37 of the 67 who balloted on the question. Far back in second place was swingin' Sam Snodgrass' all-time record golf blow-up—the eight he took on the last hole to blow the national open championship.

The only other incident to receive more than one mention was the bump Sidney Wooderson received in the Princeton mile in the little English runner's unsuccessful one-day invasion of American cinder-paths.

The sports editors accompanied their ballots for Lombardi with several picturesque descriptions of big Ernie's dive into the dust at the plate while Yankee base-runners came steaming home. You recall, two men were on base, and Joe DiMaggio was at bat in the tenth inning of the deciding game.

Dimag lined a single to right, and one runner scored. Ival Goodman, Reds' right-fielder, let the ball get away, retrieved it and winged it to the infield, for relay home. Just as Ernie got his hands on it, Charley Keller, the second base-runner, came charging in. There was a slight contact between the two, and the next thing you knew, the ball was rolling a few feet away, and big Ernie was stretched out on the ground in what the sports editors described variously as "the Lombardi coma," "the sleeping beauty act," and "the dying swan."

Di Mag Also Tallies
DiMag, by this time, had reached third, and the yankee coach therevelled, "go ahead if you want to try it; just watch the ball—you're on your own." Joe tried and made a sliding in over the out-stretched arm of Lombardi, who by this time was back in the ball game.

Football, as usual, came up with a flock of freaks in the balloting. One unidentified game was reported in which the ball split on a place-kick for extra point. The point was awarded when one-half went over the cross-bar.

One sports editor liked Jack Doyle's knockout of himself in London, another wanted to know, "who but the homer with the bases loaded when Iowa's footballers beat Purdue, 4-0?" then there was the bed lamp that up and attacked Dizzy Dean, slashing his arm; a double knockout in an amateur boxing bout at Anamosa, Iowa; and the P. G. A. strike which threatened the Professional golfers' national tournament; and the shot of Bud Johnson which hit a woman, probably causing him to lose the national open by one stroke.

Byron Nelson Shares Lead at Miami Open

Miami, Fla. (AP)—National open champion Byron Nelson, fighting an uphill battle for the nation's golfing supremacy, shared the lead with a dark horse today as a sensational-scoring field reached the third round of the $10,000 Miami open.

Little-known Gene Kunes of Philadelphia came out of yesterday's twilight shadows with a sparkling 66 to tie Nelson at 137 at the halfway mark. The National open king's chief rival, Henry Picard, was three strokes back.

Nelson not only had a chance to overcome Picard's five-point advantage and win the Harry Vardon trophy, but a revised tabulation gave him a shot at top money winner. The corrected money standing gave Nelson $8,844, Picard $10,202.

Willie Wehrle of Chicago, formerly of Racine, Wis., led the amateurs after yesterday's play with 69-72-141. Earl Christiansen, Miami amateur, was second with 145.

MILWAUKEE REDS WIN
Chicago (AP)—Milwaukee State Teachers defeated Chicago Teachers in basketball last night, 35 to 32, after training at the half, 20-14. Milwaukee trailed 30-29 with eight minutes to go when Buehler, guard forward, sank the first of three successive baskets.

ONLY one of the country's leading big circuit field trials could be expected to attract the array of talent—dogs, handlers, trainers—that will perform at the Mosquito Valley shooting preserve near Hortonville tomorrow. And yet this is only a sort of exhibit of sporting dog talents; a get-together of men and women who are interested in learning how a finished product acts.

Hundreds of spectators are likely to be in the thrilled gallery trying to discover how such well known dog men as Hogan, Wallace, Welch, Genty, Boalt, and others keep their highly keyed springers, setters and retrievers under perfect control when cackling, clucking pheasants take to the air under their very noses.

While the leading mover behind this unusual outdoor show modestly keeps in the background as far as publicity is concerned, we here and now take our well-worn hunting cap off to the energetic fellow at the head of the M. V. shooting preserve. He has worked hard and incessantly to make this event the first that we know of to be staged in such grand manner, something to be remembered in northeastern Wisconsin dog circles for many months to come.

On the success of this initial venture may rest the future of field trial activity in this area. We have maintained that the time is ripe for these promotions. Now the opportunity presents itself to learn whether or not there is enough sporting dog interest and public support to warrant the future running of competitive field trials.

North of Hortonville
One thing seems certain. Only a very thin blooded sportsman will be able to watch those superbly handled creatures hunt out their game, remain steady to "wing" and "shot" and make perfect retrieval of fallen game, without feeling a warm tingle and high-admiration. Few there should be who will not hope that some day their hunting dogs will be able to duplicate the performance.

Located 45 miles straight north of Hortonville, the huge game preserve offers the kind of cover that greets the hunter in his Fall quest for these beautiful, delectable birds of the multi-colored plumage. The dogs will have a real test of talent, and yet spectators are assured ample opportunity to watch the work. The conservation department is in charge of the bird releasing.

Although invitations went out to dozens of sportsmen, the committee could not possibly know everyone who might wish to attend the Sunday afternoon affair. We have been given the opportunity to extend through this column the hearty wish of the promoters that all dog lovers attend. You are promised a good show.

While many of us have shooting dogs, it is doubtful that many of us can boast the canine accomplishments of these finished field workers. Many of them have won their stripes in the keenest competition the country has to offer. Some of these trainers and handlers have driven hundreds of miles to run their dogs here "just for the fun of it."

There will be something doing all the afternoon, so why not decide to join the merry throng and, as the invitations state, "Dress suitable for a little hike over rough country." See you there.

Big Ten Cagers to Get Severe Tests

Michigan Takes on Notre Dame, Northwestern Meets Pitt
Chicago (AP)—At least two Western conference basketball teams, and possibly more, will get their first severe test of the young hardwood season tonight against major foes.

Michigan entertains a formidable Notre Dame machine which has rolled up impressive scores in all tests so far. The Wolverines trimmed Michigan State a week ago in their debut. Northwestern, likewise, faced a top-flight opponent in Pittsburgh, always a ranging cage power in the east.

Northwestern has won two games without too much trouble. Wisconsin also figures to have its hands full against Marquette, which bowed to the Badgers last Saturday night, 46 to 39.

Ohio State, defending champion, plays Wooster; Minnesota engages South Dakota. Chicago plays Armour Tech and Iowa and Wayne University meet at Detroit.

Only two Big Ten teams were active last night. Illinois breezed to a 46 to 15 victory over Carleton, a fifth conference team to trample the Northfield, Minn., five. Capt. Bill Hapac led the attack, pouring eight field goals and two free throws through the net for 18 points.

Indiana recorded its third straight victory of the season, defeating the University of Nebraska, 49 to 39, on the basis of early season returns the Illinois and Hoosiers appear high up in the running to give the Buckeyes a real fight for this year's crown.

The all-around play of Coach Hamann's cagers, was too much for the visitors. Williams was a tower of strength on ball handling and passed nicely on several occasions to F. Vander Velden for sleeper shots. In fact, the entire squad played heads-up ball giving the large crowd visions of another champion in Little Nine play.

Gaffney called a personal on Smiths with Adamski ringing one of the two tries but Huettl returned.

Gets Contract for Police Radio Plan

Waupaca County to Pay Total of $916.80 During Year

Waupaca — County Clerk L. J. Steiger has just received the contract for Waupaca county's radio police service, WAKE. A total of $916.80 for the year is to be paid in 12 installments beginning Jan. 1, 1940.

Bids have been let by County Clerk Steiger, for decorating the circuit court rooms. No such work has been done since the days of the CWA. Decorations in any part of the county may bid on the work which will include both painting and varnishing. Bids will be closed Dec. 22. Work must be completed before the May term of circuit court and no work can be done at any time before that period if the judge wishes the rooms for any circuit court hearings.

The new 1940 fishing laws have arrived at the clerk's office. One important change is that no one will be allowed to fish with two lines or with two poles without a fishing license. This also applies to ice fishermen who must have a license. Present rod and reel licenses will expire next April 30.

Mrs. Bertha Gergen Honored on Her 83rd Birthday Anniversary

Dale — Mrs. Bertha Gergen was honored Sunday at a surprise open house at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Edward Gergen on her eighty-third birthday. Texans 'Put Their Little Feet There' as Folk Dances Become Latest Ballroom Rage

BY WILLIAM T. RIVES
Houston, Tex. — (P) European folk dances have struck this section like a whirlwind.

Jitterbugs find them "intriguing. Old-timers find them a relief and qualified persons predict the rest of the country will take them up.

The schottische, "Put Your Little Feet There," the rye waltz, the polka — standbys last century — have struck both high and low society. In beer joints, private ballrooms, country clubs, the best hotels — everyone "puts his little foot" these days.

Just what is responsible for the sudden popularity no one is certain, but this explanation is offered:

Old Stuff

Vacationing folks who traveled to the hill country near Kerrville, Tex., where the population includes many people of German, Polish and other Central European descent, returned with word of the dances.

They learned they were old stuff at the Saengerbund (singing society) hall there. The dancing public flocked there, learned the steps, and carried them to dancing places everywhere.

So great was the demand, the city recreation department began offering free dancing lessons each evening at several parks, and dancing instructors quickly put the schottische and other dances on their lists.

Let Vincent Lopez, orchestra leader, tell his experience:

"When I came here to play a hotel engagement, I thought someone was kidding when they asked me to play 'Put Your Little Foot There.' I had never heard of it."

He saw a demonstration of the dance, heard the music, and became enthusiastic.

Putting their little feet there

"This thing is going to be far more popular than the Lambeth Walk or The Big Apple," he said. "I'll sweep the country."

Dancers say it's easy—and a world of fun.

THE NEWS

The Needle in the Haystack

By SOL HESS

UNCLE RAY'S CORNER

SATURDAY TALK

When news was flashed across the Atlantic about the sinking of the "Rawalpindi," it took my mind back to the time I was aboard that vessel. It was during the round-the-world trip I made in 1937 and 1938. After spending weeks in Egypt, I boarded the "Rawalpindi" at Port Said. From that place the vessel steamed through the Suez Canal, then down the Red sea.

There was winter weather, at the time, in Canada and most parts of Europe and the United States, but the Red sea journey was like passing through a bake oven. It lasted about three days, so I felt well baked by the time I reached Aden, Arabia.

Despite the heat, I took part in several games of "darts." I was taught this game by several young Englishmen, who were on their way to southern Asia to spend two or three years. "Darts" had become popular in England, and they had brought along the target and feathered darts to amuse themselves after they were settled. I found the game a great deal of fun, and was sorry I had not picked up a set while I was in England.

When a vessel sails from the Red sea to the Indian ocean, it passes through the Gate of Tears. Just about when that happened, I had cause for sorrow. I was overcome by a tropical illness and in a day or two was admitted to the ship hospital. The "hospital" proved to be a one-room affair, and I was the only patient.

The last part I saw of the "Rawalpindi" was a stairway which was let down to the water's edge while the ship lay at anchor in the harbor of Colombo, Ceylon. Men carried me down the stairway in a stretch-er and I was placed aboard a launch which the ship's doctor had brought out by sending a wireless message before reaching port.

Quite a crowd of passengers gathered to see me off. I raised my arm, rather weakly, to bid them farewell. Perhaps some of them wondered whether I would live to tell the tale.

The "Rawalpindi" was a rather old steamer. It used to roll about quite a bit when the weather was rough. For this reason, it was nicknamed the "Rolling-pindi."

Neat Dummy
Reversal Play
Is Analyzed

BY ELY CULBERTSON
"Dear Mr. Culbertson: The following hand, played in a rubber bridge game, contains a neat dummy reversal play which I think is interesting. It required a fortunate lay of the cards, but it was the only chance, and certainly worth a try."
"South, dealer."

The bidding:
South West North East
1 spade Pass 2 hearts Pass
2 spades Pass 3 spades Pass
4 diamonds Pass 5 spades Pass
6 spades Pass Pass

"Opening lead, heart queen."
"I felt a trifle sad when I saw such a duplication in the minors (I had hoped for at least one doubleton), but the hand looked interesting. I had a diamond loser and needed two club discards, so my plan was to discard on the ace of hearts and to try to utilize dummy's last trump for the other one. This would require four entries in to dummy, but the heart lead helped and the diamond jack might hold."
"I won the heart lead with the ace, returned a heart, and ruffed with the six. The spade ace followed and then a small diamond to the jack. This lost to the queen so I had to decide now whether to win the club return in my hand and try the trump finesse on the jack, or to try to drop the jack on the next lead. I finally decided to try for the drop, so won the club with dummy's king and trumped the third heart with the seven. The trump nine to the queen brought the jack and the last heart was trumped with my last trump, the king. Now a diamond to the king in dummy and the ten of trump drew West's last, and afforded a parking place for my losing club. Since the diamond suit broke, the hand was made."

C. H. Ohio.

The analysis of this hand is so clear that further description from me would be only superfluous. The hand was well played and stresses the valuable point that dummy's trumps can often be put to better advantage than is made of them by the average player. In this case it will be observed that South, the long trump hand, deliberately reduced himself by ruffing dummy's losing hearts, thereby establishing the North hand, which held only three trumps, as the master trump hand. The crucial point of play in hands such as this is to find out about key finesses very early, so that if they go wrong, salvaging operations will be in order. In this case the immediate lead to the diamond jack was important in that the losing finesse forced declarer to the winning line of play.

Most declarers, I am afraid, would simply take out trumps, then play about the diamond finesse and break. I highly recommend that readers study this deal as an excellent example of that valuable process of play known as "dummy reversal."

MATRONS OF HONOR
Dear Mrs. Post: I don't want a large wedding but I want to be married in church and to wear a white satin dress and a simple white veil. And to top it all, I want to have my mother for my wedding attendant. She thinks this would not be suitable. I would also like to have four men friends of my fiancé for the ushers, and would like them in the procession. I would not have any bridesmaids of course, if my mother took part, because I can understand that young bridesmaids and mother might not look right together.

Answer: The bride's mother as a regular wedding attendant could not be more incorrect. The only time when a bride's mother ever takes part in the wedding procession (and even this is unconventional) is when, as a widow, she takes her husband's place. In such a case as this there never are bridesmaids of course, although sometimes there is a flower girl or a little ring bearer. In my opinion, quite apart from the fact that your bridesmaids and four ushers would add much beauty to the wedding, your mother's own proper role should be much more satisfying to her. She can of course remain with you at the house, until you are dressed, she might even drive with you and your father to the church. She remains with you in the vestibule of the church until you are actively ready to go up the aisle. She then enters immediately ahead of you and when she has taken her place in the front pew, she has a "rear view" of you coming up the aisle, and later on your face is turned toward her as you and your bridesmaids come down the chancel steps and start down the aisle.

Beauty and You

by PATRICIA LINDSAY

LANA TURNER with her Christmas Tree Hat is the very essence of the holiday spirit—to her shopping is fun!

There is no denying the fact that the woman who has an attractive appearance receives quicker and better attention from sales people. A hard nut to crack but there it is—and this is especially so during the Christmas rush. And do not write and say, "Taint so," for I experimented!

Not practicing what I preach, I hurried out the other day to get a lot of shopping done. I took hardly no time at all to put on my make-up and select my accessories. The result? I had a dreadful day. I was ignored at almost every counter where there were other shoppers. The tired salespeople just look a look at me and thought, "That girl isn't here to shop, she's just whiling away her day!" For a very busy person, it was annoying.

Next day I started out differently. I dressed carefully, wore my newest most becoming hat, a pair of chic walking shoes and spent at least fifteen minutes making my face look like a well-informed beauty editor's face should look. Did I get attention? Heavens, I thought I was Mrs. Astor, before the day was over! The sales people not only singled me out for attention but they actually suggested gifts for my shopping list.

That's the Way It Is!
Now if you want attention at any time, be just as attractive as you can be. Dress the part, look the part, act the part! A winning manner, a smile, alert eyes and apparent good grooming will take you farther in life than a long list of impressive ancestors! Look up, impressions matter a great deal. You draw up to a gas pump for gasoline. An indolent, untidy person comes out to give you gas as if he were doing you a big favor. Will you patronize his when? (b) Also, will you tell me which is correct: the maid to leave the glass on the table while pouring water, or to lift it up off the table?

Answer: (a) Unless fruit is to be eaten on the fingers, finger bowls are not supplied at breakfast. (b) To leave it on the table.

Table Manners
Dear Mrs. Post: I am never quite sure just what I should do with my napkin after I've had dinner at a friend's house. Please tell me what is correct.

Answer: You gather the napkin loosely together into a shape somewhat like a partly opened fan and leave it at the left of your plate. Of course, if you are staying in the house, you should do what your hostess does. If she folds her napkins, you fold yours too, because then you are expected to use it again.

Mrs. Post is sorry she can no longer answer personal letters. She is glad however to have many printed slips on a variety of subjects to offer to her readers. Today's slip is "The Origin of the Great American Rudeness." Be sure to send

Personal Liberty of Husband
Doesn't Include Philandering

BY DOROTHY DIX

Dear Miss Dix—How do you interpret personal liberty for a married man? Does it mean freedom to go ANYWHERE he desires with WHOMSOEVER he desires? My husband claims that because he is married is no reason why he should not have a sweetheart to make life interesting for him. He says he is fifty years ahead of the times and that the day will come when no one will be criticized for enjoying a little innocent fun. At present his enamored wife is a married woman. He takes her out to places of amusement and rarely asks me to go anywhere unless he can have this particular woman with him, too. For the last two summers he has insisted on spending our vacation with the "other woman" and her husband, which does not make it pleasant for me or the woman's husband. My husband insists that he is broad-minded and that I may have the privilege of amusing myself as he does, but on the few occasions when I have gone out with a man there have been questionings and arguments. My husband says he cannot see why I should object to his affairs because he would not leave me for any other woman, and he thinks that I should be as sweet and loving as ever to him and should be willing to share him with other women. Should I?

Dorothy Dix
X. Y. Z.

Answer: My idea of the personal liberty to which a married man is entitled is the right to pick out his own neckties, have sole possession of his hairbrush, be permitted to eat what he likes without being told how bad it is for his digestion; to have an evening out every week if he wants it; to be able to go off on fishing or hunting party with his cronies every now and then.

But a married man's personal liberty stops there or thereabout, and it certainly doesn't include the privilege of philandering and spending his time and his money on other women, while his wife sits at home by her lonesome wondering where her wandering boy is tonight. There is no compulsion about marriage. A man isn't shanghaied into it when he is drunk or doped. He goes into it of his own free will and accord, well knowing the obligations and restrictions it lays upon him. He knows that he is swearing at the altar to give up all other women for one. He knows that he is forfeiting his personal liberty, and unless he is willing to live up to the contract he has made he has no right to marry.

When a philanderer tells his wife that he loves her lies, because if he still loved her he would not be so willing to live up to the contract he has made he has no right to marry. Some men think that they soften the blow to the girl by breaking it to her gently, by not keeping dates, by not going to see her, by being always busy when she phones, and so on. From which she is bound to deduce, if she has any sense at all, that he has lost his taste in her and that everything is over between them. Other men take the more brutal yet kinder method of breaking off the affair definitely once and for all, but this takes more courage than the average fellow possesses. I incline to the latter plan, but if you use it do it by letter and not personally. Otherwise the girl will weep on your breast and you will take back all you have said and you will be just where you were before. All women know every turn in the water route to the altar and have hoisted millions of men who married to marry them into marriage on their tears.

Don't think you are doing any girl a kindness by marrying her for pity. The greatest wrong any man can do without loving her is to marry her without loving her.

School Kids Should Forget About Love
Dear Miss Dix—We are a school girl and boy who are thinking about being secretly married. Shall we do it or wait until we are finished school? UNCERTAIN.

Answer: Wait not only until you have finished school but until you are old enough to know what real love is and have some certain way of making a living. Don't ever marry secretly. A secret marriage is a smear on your character as long as you live.

But, unfortunately, there is nothing a wife can do toward reforming a philandering husband. Neither tears or arguments or persuasion will stop him. He will go on chasing every skirt until he gets too old and rheumatic to keep up with the debutantes, and then he will come back and expect to be made the family pet.

Breaking Off Love
Affair Is Hard Task

My Neighbor Says—
After the greater part of an Edam cheese has been removed, the shell may be stuffed with cooked and seasoned macaroni or rice and baked.

When sandwiches are buttered, the filling is not so likely to soak into the bread and make it soggy.

Before placing steaks and chops on the broiler pan, heat the pan sizzling hot. Steaks and chops will not then stick to the pan.

Scraple can be made at home by adding chopped meat, cheese or chicken to thick cornmeal mush. Put this mixture in a bowl and chill it. Then slice it and brown the slices in a little fat in a frying pan. Serve plain or with syrup or scrambled eggs.

We, after many years of living with children, have come to believe that every activity that children practice merges into the next activity, giving it quality and strength and direction. To that end one would select values in games wherever possible. Gun games would set certain qualities in a child's attitudes and behavior; and, to my way of thinking, those qualities are not what we, his friends, would choose for him, and for those who might come under his influence.

When a small boy, not so small either, considering his eleven years, steals softly up behind an elderly woman, his hostess, and snaps a toy pistol behind her head, who can call his behavior valuable? When a group of seven-year-olds hide in the shrubbery and dash out yelling wildly at the riders on the bridge path, frightening the horses and throwing a rider, who can call their behavior valuable, even decent?

Children do not know the implications of their behavior, but the grown people who give them the toy guns and smile at their playing with them, ought to understand, if they do not. Bad manners do lead to bad conduct and much trouble for child and family.

There are many good games for children of all ages. There are ball games, tools, cameras, fishing rods, bats, boards and boats. The world is full of ways to happiness and joy, and many of them are open to all children. Parents and friends who give children toy pistols, guns, uniforms that suggest gangs and far and gangs, knives to be carried in a sheath in the belt, are responsible for whatever ill effects these things have upon the children and society.

It is a very well to say that boys must be trained to use guns in defense of their country. It that were true it does not apply to children, at least in this country. A gun used to defend one's country is an

In the realm of ethics we have certain inextinguishable laws which are as exact as those of mathematics, where 2 x 2 always makes 4. There is no compromising in mathematics, nor is there any reason for doing so regarding such crookedness as that mentioned below. A baby rattlesnake is still a rattlesnake; never a harmless garter snake!

CASE P-130: Dr. L. W. Webb is one of our outstanding professors of education.

Recently he conducted a very interesting experiment to determine the honesty of college students. He gave the students an examination and then collected the papers, after which he carefully recorded their scores without, however, making any marks on the papers.

At the next class meeting he turned the papers back to the students with the excuse that because he was pressed for time he would read off the correct answers while they scored their own exam papers.

At the conclusion of this check-up, he called in the papers. Then he compared the grades which the students gave themselves, with the original grades which he had already recorded.

The examination was of the objective sort, as a "true-false" type of quiz, so the students could easily erase and substitute the correct answer during the check-up, if they wished to cheat.

Dishonesty Among College Students
Of the students thus exposed to the temptation of erasing and raising their grades, 30 per cent made at least one erasure, while 25 per cent of the students changed from 2 to 7 answers in order to give themselves a higher score.

This is downright cheating in any language! It is dishonesty of a serious sort and among university students!

Professor Webb deserves commendation for this interesting ob-

The Creeping Man

by Frances Shelley Wees

Yesterday: At the garden party Miss Lissey takes Duncan aside and speaks to him vehemently. Later she calls Michael, Tuck and Bunny over to her house, and tells them she knows the murderer.

Chapter 30
"I Know Too Much"

"I'll begin at the beginning," said Miss Lissey. "The night school closed. I had been at a party, certainly I wouldn't want to be caught walking through the woods. And just after I passed the work in the path and turned this way, I heard someone coming, distinctly. I slipped off the path, and hid behind a tree."

Michael's eyes were dark. Tuck was leaning forward in his chair. Bunny was pale as death.

"For a minute I couldn't make out what I saw or who was coming. It didn't sound just right—there was a sort of squeaking noise, and as it got opposite me I realized that it was the wheel of a barrow squeaking. The moon was low, but there was just enough light down the path to make the outlines clear. The man wheeling the barrow was in a hurry."

"The man?" Tuck gasped.

"Yes, a man we . . . all know. I knew him by his figure. But that wasn't what caught my eye. It was . . . what I saw in the barrow."

"By his figure?" Michael repeated strangely.

Miss Lissey shuddered.

"I didn't realize then what I was seeing. It was such a strange mysterious business. I almost believed I was dreaming it, when I saw that man, bent with the load, that heavy barrow, with a man's legs dangling from the end, and a white hand over the side near me. I thought: I thought someone had had too much to drink. I didn't stop to wonder where, or who he was . . . that was the thought that flashed into my mind. The man and the barrow turned off and went down toward the river."

"The next day I heard that Professor Murchison had gone away on a trip. I believed it, until I remembered that thing I had seen the night before. When it was dusk I went out and looked at the Murchison gate, and there were the marks of the barrow, clear and deep in the path. So I knew."

Michael started to speak, but she held up her hand. "I'll tell it in my own way," she said. "There's a lot else you must understand first. She came in gasps. Her fore head was wet with perspiration. She opened her eyes and looked up at him. "Mayed I know . . . too much . . .?" she muttered faintly.

"Miss Lissey! Miss Lissey!" Tuck shooed her shoulder in terror. "The . . . hat," she breathed, and her head dropped back against the chair.

Bunny was already at the telephone, and it was only a few minutes before they heard the doctor's car coming from the University. He ran in, put his hand on the unconscious woman's head, glanced into her eyes, and felt her pulse. He turned to Michael.

"I'm afraid it's too late," he said. "She's dead."

It's My Fault!
Michael was on the Commissioner's office early, after a sleepless night. The District Attorney was there before him, standing at the night, Michael! The house wasn't molested?

The Commissioner looked up from the paper in his hand.

"It was poison, Michael. You were right."

Michael went over and stood beside his father, surveying the landscape.

"They ought to paint those old street cars, don't you think so?" he inquired.

His father thrust his hands deeper into his pockets and jingled his keys.

The Commissioner spoke again. "You . . . had no trouble during the night, Michael? The house wasn't molested?"

Michael did not answer. He threw his hat suddenly to the desk, and pounded his palm with a clenched fist. His gray eyes were bitter.

"Damn it all!" he said. "It's my fault. I could have avoided it. There's no excuse for me—she needn't have died. It's my fault!"

Davies folded his papers together carefully. "I don't see how you make that out, my boy."

"I do. I should have seen . . . I should have been watching more closely. That devil."

"His father swung on him suddenly. "You know it. It's my fault. I don't know. I can only guess. I can't prove it—yet. But I will! I will!"

"You can't stay there, Michael. I've got to stay there. It's just as safe for me as for anybody, and

Neenah Officials Revive Question Of Second Bridge

Ask for Another Hearing At Meeting With County Road Committee

Post-Crescent Oshkosh Bureau

Oshkosh — The question of constructing another bridge across the Fox river at Neenah to relieve the traffic congestion on the Commercial street bridge was revived again when a delegation of Neenah city officials met with the highway committee of the Winnebago county board Friday afternoon.

Included in the Neenah delegation were Mayor Edwin A. Kalfahs, City Clerk H. S. Zemlock, and Aldermen James Andersen, John Heigl and Richard O'Brien. The group was invited to the committee meeting to discuss highway aids, but capitalized on the presence of D. E. Culbertson, Green Bay division engineer of the state highway department, to plead for another public hearing on the bridge project.

Mayor Kalfahs told the highway officials that Neenah has experienced a severe increase in traffic congestion since the last public hearing was held. He pointed out the need of a traffic survey on the Commercial street bridge and said Neenah proposed to send a delegation of city officials to Madison to ask W. E. O'Brien, chairman of the state highway department, to reconsider the construction of another bridge to be built at the end of Oak or Pine streets.

Discusses New Law

Representatives of Neenah, Menasha and Oshkosh met with the highway committee Friday to discuss a new law requiring the county to connect its county trunk highways with state trunk highways within cities. At present the county trunks terminate at the city limits but under the new law they would be extended down city streets to a point of intersection with a state highway.

Unless the various cities pass legislation withdrawing from the provisions of the new law and deciding to maintain these streets themselves the change will become effective Jan. 1, 1940. If the cities approve the bill the county will maintain the connecting links and the city will cease to receive state aid for their maintenance.

The bill affects Racine street in Menasha from the city limits on the Appleton-Menasha road, county trunk 7, to its intersection with county trunk 10, a distance of eight tenths of a mile. Edward C. McKenzie, Menasha city attorney, told the committee that the Menasha council was unaware that the cemetery road was a county trunk and hadn't paid any attention to the new law.

Two Miles in Neenah

In Neenah S Commercial street from its junction with Winnebago to the city limits and Wisconsin avenue from its intersection with Commercial street to the lake shore road and over County Trunk 7 to the city limits would become connecting links. Approximately two miles of Neenah streets are included in this change.

Sanatorium Patients Convert Cast-Offs Into Saleable Goods

Post-Crescent Oshkosh Bureau Oshkosh.—To the average housewife a soupbone is something you give to the dog after the soup has been cooked, while an old toothbrush is merely material for the garbage can. But to a number of patients with "time on their hands" at the Sunnyside sanatorium, such cast-offs are the raw material for distinctive women's costume jewelry.

According to Miss Agnes Mattson, superintendent of the Winnebago and Fond du Lac county institution, such unique hobbies are mere commonplace features of the occupational therapy program carried out for the recreation of bed patients, under the direction of Miss Genevieve Fitzgerald.

The recreational program must be adaptable to the individual needs of the patient and be purposeful enough to arouse interest, give courage and confidence. It is prescribed by and given under constant medical advice and supervision.

Individual Case. Striking example of the therapy program as applied to an individual case is found in the story of a young woman who learned bonecraft while she was able to sit up in bed. Miss Fitzgerald began searching for some recreation for her. Leathercraft failed to arouse his interest, but bonecraft did.

After a few elementary lessons the hobby took hold and soon the patient was making lockets, crosses and initial jewelry out of toothbrush handles and soapbuds. The jewelry is characterized by remarkable symmetry and artistry. The patient, who uses nothing but a small saw and a file, sold his odd jewelry just as fast as he could make it. He has since left the hospital and is consuming his leisure time catching up on his back orders.

Another patient is taking an university extension course in commercial photography. A dark room has been constructed for him and whenever he feels strong enough, he develops, prints, and experiments in photography in the basement of the sanatorium. He confided that the lessons, designed to take a month per set to complete, took him a week to master.

Novelties For Sale. Two display cases crammed with beautiful objects of needlecraft, embroidery, weaving, leathercraft and yarn animals, attest to the success of the therapy program. These novelties are for sale to visitors and were created by convalescents during the long, idle hours of lying in bed.

"We have to keep up with the fads," says Miss Fitzgerald, director of the program. She is never satisfied until she has discovered a native interest in each of the institution's patients. Those noisy adornments of modern smartness, wooden shoes, are made of women patients at Sunnyside.

For the stronger patients a small workshop and a sewing room are fully equipped. Women and girls oftentimes make their own dresses and children are fond of taking a ball of yarn and creating surprisingly life-like animals. Sweaters, dresses and pajamas come in for their share of attention.

Although patients are provided with liberal quantities of reading matter, they publish their own newspaper. The publication is issued in mimeographed form and contains items of general interest to Sunnyside residents. It is called "Vox Sanitas," "the voice of the sanatorium."

Driverless Auto Goes Between Two Trees Into Canal

Menasha.—An automobile owned by Miss Ruby Hart, 342 Oak street, Menasha, took a pre-Saturday night bath Friday afternoon when it rolled from its parking place on River street and submerged completely in the government canal.

Miss Hart parked her automobile on the north side of River street behind Hotel Menasha and went in to Elisha D. Smith public library for the meeting of the Menasha Economics club. The car was parked on a slight knoll with the wheels cranked and locked so that when the vehicle started to roll it went across the road, slipped between two trees, which might have stopped it, plunged down a four foot bank, and plunged into the canal.

Not even the roof of the car was visible. The channel of the canal is about 14 feet deep. It took an hour and a half to remove the car.

Make Christmas Happy, Drive Carefully, Says Home Mutual Co.

(This article has been prepared by the Home Mutual Casualty Company.)

When the Wise men of the First Christmas brought frankincense and myrrh and precious gifts for the new born King who lay in the manger in the town of Bethlehem, a new social and religious movement rose from that humble birthplace. A guiding star was the awakening of the joyous Christmas spirit. People soon learned that "it was better to give than to receive."

Since this is the season of giving, most of us give thought to what we can do to contribute to the happiness of others. We buy toys to make the little ones merry and gifts for those dear to us. We help in a material way to bring cheer to those less fortunate through charity organizations. If we are more serious minded individuals, we, also, extend our giving in a practical way to the community.

The Home Mutual Casualty Company of Appleton asks every car driver to spread Christmas cheer by making the highways safe by ways during the Yuletide season. In scurrying to get that last bit of shopping done, be mindful of others and exercise every precaution in using the highways. A holiday injury or death will not only mean a sad Christmas this year to someone, but will bring bitter memories to those same persons as Christmas rolls around each year.

The control of highway accidents must come from your efforts. Statistics show that outside help and control have been unsuccessful without your cooperation. Keep the star of this Christmas bright by obeying the following simple traffic rules which, when broken, cause so many accidents:

1. Drive at a moderate rate of speed and have your car under control at all times.
2. Keep your eye on the roadway ahead of you. Be attentive to your driving job.
3. Be sure your car is in safe operating order to meet an unexpected emergency.
4. Do not pass on hills and sound your horn loudly when passing elsewhere.
5. Obey stop and go signals and arterial stop signs.
6. Signal when deviating from the regular lane of traffic.

As a further precaution during the busy holiday season when many will be calling on friends and relatives and using the nation's highways, provide for the security of both yourself and family by insuring against claims resulting from automobile accidents, in which you may or may not be at fault, in the Home Mutual Casualty Company, Appleton's home company, located on the fourth floor of the Zuelke Building, Appleton. You may call 4600 for further details.

THAR SHE BLOWS
Murfreesboro, Tenn.—(AP)—M. B. Hollandsworth, State Highway Department employee, and Will Ridley still aren't sure how it happened, but they found themselves in a hospital—each with a broken left arm.

As near as they can figure it out, Hollandsworth was changing a tire on a large truck. Ridley came up to lend him a tool and was standing by, watching, when the tire blew off.

Lutz Meets Party Problem With Ice Cubes in Cartons

Suggests Coolerator as Ideal Family Christmas Gift

A popular feature of the Lutz Ice Company service which again is expected to be in great demand with the approach of the holiday season and its accompanying Christmas and New Year's parties is its specially packed ice cubes in cartons of 48. Lutz suggests that now is the time to place orders for this special service, to assure a plentiful supply when these special occasions arrive.

A welcome Christmas gift, most families agree, would be a beautiful Coolerator. Lutz invites consideration of this gift suggestion, explaining that there is, perhaps, nothing quite so important to the health of the family as efficient, modern refrigeration to assure guaranteed food protection. In order to satisfactorily convince prospective purchasers, Lutz continues to make its attractive offer of a 10-day free trial of any model, and in the event of purchase, free ice service will be given until March 1.

The result of this free trial, the Lutz firm believes will show conclusively why the Coolerator brings results not obtainable with other types of refrigeration. A scientific and natural principle upon which the Coolerator works in conjunction with Lutz's crystal pure manufactured ice, produces unequalled performance, they believe.

A wide variety of fuels including the popular packaged peatbriquettes, the modern method of clean heating, also offered by Lutz Ice Company, makes the choice of fuels for making and deliveries, consequently, are being made daily to homeowners who wish to make certain of receiving guaranteed heating satisfaction at lowest cost. For high quality fuel, pure manufactured ice, packaged ice cubes, or a 10-day free trial of a beautiful new Coolerator it is only necessary to call the firm at number 2.

LA VILLA CANDIES REALLY PLEASE

Christmas and candy are inseparable, reminds the La Villa, popular candy headquarters and eating place, 150 E. College avenue. A typical Christmas package of La Villa candy which is certain to bring happiness to anybody is pictured here. In addition, purchasers can again secure the famous "Templation Mixed," assortment of chocolates and bon bons in either Christmas boxes or bulk form. Incidentally, the lunches at La Villa are a delightful help to Christmas shoppers during these last busy days and whether appetites are inclined toward tea and toast, beer and sandwich, or a full course luncheon, La Villa is sure to please.

Belling's, Health Headquarters, Is Fine Spot for Christmas Gifts

Smart Christmas shoppers are not overlooking the splendid gift possibilities again being offered at Belling's Drug Store, 204 E. College avenue. Numerous gifts destined to delight the heart of even the most particular recipient are featured.

A large selection of fountain pen styles, for example, featuring the famous Schaeffer pen sets, attractively boxed stationery, cosmetics of all kinds, including the nationally known Yardley and Max Factor lines, toilet sets, smoking supplies, and candy are but a few of the gift suggestions being offered.

Meanwhile, Belling's offers its customary seasonal warning that winter is apt to be a real menace in maintaining good health. Therefore, constant caution is necessary and it becomes important that slight illnesses must be checked immediately before they prove to be serious.

A checkup of the family medicine chest is, therefore, in order to make sure that a plentiful supply of first aid items is on hand to ward off trouble at its very first sign. Medicine chests, Belling's warns, can only be found useful in time of need if they are always well-stocked with fresh, pure drugs.

Day in and day out, year after year, Belling's have enjoyed being the doctor's right-hand man in this respect as well as in prescription-filling. A prompt delivery service, available at any time of the day or night, is one of its outstanding features. The telephone number is 131.

"I know more. I know it, and I can't prove it—nobody else could step in now. . . . And this last terrible bust . . . he ran his fingers through his hair, and looked up sharply. "How long before she died did she take the poison?"

"Not more than two hours, the coroner thinks."

"That means about five o'clock. So she certainly got it at our place. She was there from quarter past four until seven."

"Who had access to the food she ate?"

"Everybody. That's the damnable part. . . . I should have known better."

"What do you mean, everybody?"

"Just that. Ourselves, of course. Charlotte Jean. All the men helped to serve, and the women were milling around. There's no possible way of sorting out any one particular action. We'll have to get at it differently. The person who killed Edgar Murchison killed her."

"And won't stop there," his father said quietly.

"But dad—do you want me to leave?"

"No."

"Well, there you are."

"The girls?"

Michael groaned. "I've talked all night to them. It's no good. Tuck won't leave me, and Bunny won't leave Tuck."

Cinderella Will Stage 3 Holiday Dancing Parties

Ballroom Promises Novel Ideas Plus Enjoyable Music

Cinderella ballroom enters the holiday season with an outstanding combination of good bands and unusual dance ideas, Charles Maloney, manager, indicated yesterday.

First of these is a pre-Christmas dance next Thursday, December 21, when Lawrence Duchow and his Red Ravens appear at Cinderella. Twenty plump chickens are to be awarded as dance prizes to couples who come to enjoy themselves with the popular Duchow organization.

The usual Sunday dance will not be held at Cinderella on December 24, since this coincides with Christmas Eve. However, a big Christmas party will be staged Christmas night with dancing around the Christmas tree in a ballroom decorated for the occasion. Dodo Rachman's orchestra will furnish the music for this occasion.

A New Year's party that will measure up to the gay Cinderella tradition will be held at the ballroom on Sunday, December 31, and will continue until 2 a. m. Monday. The Bablers' band will be on hand for the occasion, more details about which are to be released later.

State Improving Winter Sports Facilities in Northern Areas

Madison—Winter sports will be featured at a number of state parks during the coming season under a conservation department program to extend the usefulness of these public recreation areas beyond the usual summer activities.

The department said today that it is cooperating with local groups in the arrangement of programs and development of facilities for winter sports activities in a number of areas.

Extensive winter sports facilities have been provided at Rib Mountain State park, near Wausau, where a winter sports building is being completed and an area is being developed for a wide variety of skiing activities. One of the features of this park is a ski tow, to pull ski enthusiasts back up the hill and eliminate the tedious climbs.

Arrangements also are being made by the department for families at Devil's Lake and Peninsula State parks. There will be open slope skiing and ski and snowshoe trails are being provided. Winter recreational facilities are being planned for Mauthe lake, in the Kettle Moraine forest, as a service for people in the area and the rest of that populous section of southeastern Wisconsin.

Good roads make the state parks readily accessible to people from considerable distances and developments this year are expected to be of state-wide interest. C. L. Harrington, superintendent of forests and parks, declared that in the development of winter sports the department hopes to very materially expand the year-long usefulness of the state parks.

LEAVES HIS IMPRINT BEHIND

Paris—(AP)—Overheard outside the doors of a Paris church, one Sunday morning:

"Good morning, dear Madame Jacques, where is your son Jean now?"

"Hello, dear Madame Noel. Oh, Jean is somewhere in France, with the air service."

"Ah, I see. Pursuit?"

"No."

"Reconnaissance?"

"No."

"Bombers, then?"

"No, Jean is with the Tract Corps."

"He flies over Germany and drops pamphlets."

A British war office appeal for binoculars brought in 600 pairs in two days, several from German refugees who, as officers in the World war, used them "against England."
